Safe Haven Infant Protection Act Confidential Drop-off for Unwanted Infants.
New Jersey's Safe Haven Infant Protection Act allows an individual to give up an unwanted infant without fear of arrest or prosecution. No names or records are required. The parents - or someone acting on their behalf - can bring a baby less than 30 days old to any hospital emergency room or police station. The baby may also be surrendered at fire stations and ambulance, first aid, or rescue squads that are staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week.
