Currently works as a Senior Advisory Associate at KPMG

Please explain your career – title, daily responsibilities, what you like about your job...

I am a senior associate at KPMG in its Deal advisory practice. Our group has several verticals including financial and operational due diligence, technical accounting, and strategy consulting, all of which focus on mergers and acquisitions. I was lucky enough to get into a rotational program that allowed me to work in several of these verticals over the past two years.

I enjoy the fast paced nature of my job and making a tangible impact on the work we ultimately send out to clients. At an extremely junior level, KPMG trusts and expects its staff to be integral parts of engagement teams.

On top of what I mentioned above, KPMG also offers a great deal of education and personal development opportunities. We have annual trainings offsite as a national practice, but also on a smaller scale we have learning opportunities at the local level too. Everything from learning about another industry you may not have expertise in to classes on coding.

Who at HT influenced you in a positive way? How did that person help you grow?

Something Nick Luisi, one of my JV baseball coaches, mentioned to our team has stuck with me since my sophomore year. He said “You practice hard so that that when you actually play, it becomes muscle memory.” Though I can admit to not fully appreciating his words at the time, I have definitely relied on that advice immensely in the “real world.”

What is your earliest memory of your “Titan Experience?” Do you remember your first day of school? How did you feel?

I don’t recall my first memory from Trinity but I definitely have fond recollections of spending time with my friends from the baseball team. Things as simple as picking up Michael Huber for school (if you are reading this, I hope you remember the cat story) or consistently listening to Hondo claim he was drafted by the Brooklyn Dodgers, are some of the moments I hold closest to my heart from high school. I’m grateful that no matter how far we get from that time or how complicated our lives become, those moments will forever connect us.

What advice do you have for current Titans?

Use your mistakes as learning experiences. You are going to fail at things in life, it’s just a fact. But you shouldn’t let these shortcomings in life define you. Instead, let them fuel you to achieve great things. I think Lou Holtz said it best, “In this world, you’re either growing or you’re dying, so get in motion and grow.”
