Labor Day

Monday is Labor Day, a day to honor human work and all human workers. It is a unique secular holiday with profound Christian potential. During this pandemic, it may or may not mean back-to-school for all students when we begin the work of education.

Labor Day invites all Christians to examine how we view our own labor in the light of the Scriptures and the teaching of the Church that emphasizes the dignity of all human work, not because of the type of work, but because it is done by human persons who are created in the Likeness and Image of God.

In 1981, Pope St. John Paul II released an Encyclical letter entitled, "On Human Work" which beautifully presents a Christian vision of the dignity of human work and the worker.

In this encyclical, John Paul II said, "(W)ork means any activity by man, whether manual or intellectual, whatever its nature or circumstances; it means any human activity that can and must be recognized as work, in the midst of all the many activities of which man is capable and to which he is predisposed by his very nature, by virtue of humanity itself. Man is made to be in the visible universe an image and likeness of God himself, and he is placed in it in order to subdue the earth."

"From the beginning therefore he is called to work. Work is one of the characteristics that distinguishes man from the rest of creatures, whose activity for sustaining their lives cannot be called work. Only man is capable of work, and only man works, at the same time by work occupying his existence on earth. Thus work bears a particular mark of man and of humanity, the mark of a person operating within a community of persons. And this mark decides its interior characteristics; in a sense it constitutes its very nature."

In 2004, John Paul II explained to participants at the Catholic Action gathering an important understanding of the Incarnation that Jesus, the "Divine Worker of Nazareth" also reminds us that 'life is more than food' and that work is for man, not man for work. What makes a life great is not the entity of gain, nor the type of profession, or the level of the career. Man is worth infinitely more than the goods he produces or possesses."

This Labor Day, let us ask the Holy Spirit to renew our minds concerning all human work... one which is rooted in a rediscovery of the dignity of the human person. [Based on and quoted from Catholic Online 9/2/18]
