Travel Information

We recommend that you fly into Lyon-Saint Exupéry Airport. From the U.S., Canada, and many other countries you can fly into any major European hub and get a connecting flight to Lyon.

From the Lyon-Saint Exupéry Airport, take the tram/train called the Rhone Express (a red train) to Lyon-Part-Dieu train station. Follow the many signs for the Rhone Express in the airport. You may buy tickets at the red kiosques near the airport exit. We are emphasizing Lyon-Part-Dieu train station (Gare in French) because there are several train stations in Lyon and you must use Gare de Lyon-Part-Dieu in order to take the train to Le Puy.

Sometimes the train from Lyon or Paris ends at the St Etienne-Chateaucieux train station. You will need to transfer trains to get to Le Puy. Please note that the city of St Etienne has four train stations and that the only one that goes to Le Puy is St Etienne-Chateaucieux.

The official website for the French railways (SNCF) may be helpful in your travel planning: www.voyages-sncf.com (language preference on screen, top right) Contact us if you need other information.
