The Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, which we celebrate on August 15th is that she was taken up to Heaven, body and soul, without corruption. If the Blessed Virgin lacked original sin, then her body must have escaped corruption. It was fitting that she, who had kept her virginity intact in childbirth, should keep her own body free from all corruption even after death. It was also fitting that she, who carried the Creator as a child at her breast, should dwell in the divine tabernacles. Likewise, in our day, full of its own uncertainties, we can take the solemnity of Mary's Assumption as an opportunity to turn to the Blessed Mother and hope in the promises of God to which she aspired.

O Mary Queen of Heaven, pray for us!

Happy Feast to all...

Marriage Minute— I promise to be true to you in good times and bad. We never know when the “bad times” will come, but like Jesus reminds us in this weekend's Gospel, we can use the “good times” to get prepared!

- Learn to describe and share feelings, so that when difficult situations arise, you can share the accompanying feelings in a clear and comfortable manner.
- Practice forgiveness. Having a good process in place to ask and grant forgiveness not only works through the problem, but gives you deeper insight into your spouse and confidence you can face any problem.
- Learn what makes your spouse feel loved, cherished, and respected. This way, when you are short on time and energy, you can focus on just those things that mean the most to your spouse. You can learn all these at Every Day in Love! www.archkck.org/everyday

Reflecting On Sunday's Readings

In this week's Gospel Reading Jesus continues his teaching about possessions by introducing a profound principle; "where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." This principle shows an irrefutable link between our possessions and our affections. Consequently, possessions can either be an encumbrance to our affection for Christ, or an impetus for it. Possessions are an encumbrance when concern for them displaces our concern about Christ and his mission. Like a jaded affair they can compromise our love and steal our affections. On the other hand, they can become an impetus to our affection for Christ. Most marriage counselors will tell you that love is primarily a verb, not a feeling. If your marriage is struggling, start loving—doing loving things—and the feelings will come around and catch up with your loving behavior. So it is with possessions, when through love we make them available to Christ and his mission they lead our hearts to him, for, where our treasure is, there will be our heart also. Because of this connection between the investing of our possessions in the things of Christ and our affection for Christ, Jesus advises those with possessions (all of us) to sell and give. Several saints, both Catholic and Protestant, have taken this principle literally and divested themselves of great wealth and followed Christ. Many having been raised in a life of wealth and luxury, changed when Christ became centermost in their lives, and they gave their inheritance away so that they could serve God with singleness of heart. This total dedication to Christ and his Kingdom is no little thing. It must be preceded by faith in Jesus' promise, "it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The Kingdom of God is a reality, a real thing, however it is an invisible reality. Though we cannot draw a map to it, or build a fence around it, it is real and we can see and experience its affects. Faith enables us to shift our focus and concerns from the material things of this world to the immaterial things of the Kingdom of God. This is what the second reading refers to when it says, "faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen." When by faith we are able to grasp the things of Christ it becomes only reasonable to abandon the things of the world that will hinder our pursuit of Christ. Will we dispossess ourselves of the things that possess us, and allow ourselves to be totally possessed by Christ? This does not mean that we must divest ourselves of all that is necessary for life, but it does mean that we must begin viewing things, and our desires for things, differently. This world and the things of this world are temporal and will pass away and become as nothing—is that the thing to which we really want to give our lives? The Kingdom of God, though seemingly invisible, is concrete and real, lasting for eternity, and can be comprehended by faith. Our lives, time, energy, talents, and treasure, are the only things we have to invest. However, we can chose the realm in which we are going to invest them. A young martyr for the faith, Jim Elliot, aptly said, "He is no fool who gives away that which he cannot keep, to gain that which he cannot lose." Let's be wise also.
