St. Francis Xavier was the first missionary to bring the Christian faith to Japan between 1549 and 1551. In only a few years, about 300,000 converted to Christianity. St. Francis Xavier and his Jesuit missionaries were able to bring the faith to so many because of their respect for Japanese customs and beliefs not directly opposed to Christian teachings. However, in 1587, the emperor changed his benevolent attitude toward Christians and published a decree of expulsion of foreign missionaries. St. Paul Miki and Companions, the martyrs of Japan, were canonized in 1862.

ST. PAUL MIKI (and Companions)
 Paul Miki was a Jesuit and native of Japan. Once the persecution of Christians began in Japan, Paul, along with 25 companions from all walks of life—Jesuits, Spanish Franciscans who arrived in Japan from the Philippines, and seventeen laymen—were arrested, severely mistreated and, finally, sentenced to death. Because they were Christians, they were crucified on a hill in Nagasaki. They died on February 5, 1597, singing the psalm: "Praise, you servants of the Lord, praise the name of the Lord." (Ps 135:1).

ST. PABLO MIKI (y Compañeros)
 Una vez comenzada la persecución de los cristianos en Japón, Pablo Miki, jesuita originario de Japón, junto con veinticinco compañeros de fe: jesuitas, franciscanos españoles que habían llegado a Japón desde Filipinas, y diecisiete laicos, fueron arrestados, severamente maltratados y condenados a muerte. Como eran cristianos, fueron crucificados en una colina en Nagasaki. Muerieron el 5 de febrero de 1597, cantando el salmo: "Alabad siervos de Señor, alaben el nombre del Señor."
 Pablo Miki y Compañeros Mártires de Japón fueron canonizados en 1862.
