JULY 9th, 2017

Table talk banter in the rectory dining room can range from the banal to the bombastic, especially in a house of six priests. That number is quite unusual these days, considering the priest shortage. But twenty years ago that was my living situation. From retired to newly ordained, we were a mixed bag of opinions.

One gent in particular was big on details in his storytelling. That prompted the reigning pastor to say one day in frustration "X, get to the verb!" We all laughed together at that, and even the stymied Father X managed a smile amid his surprise. I presume that man learned that some details in storytelling are unnecessary. In today's jargon, someone may have told him "TMI."

Now on to today's Gospel passage. When Jesus our Lord said what He did about people coming to Him for rest when the burdens pile up, I'm certain that no one questioned Him about the details of how He was going to provide it.

The same holds true for His easy yoke. In this case, Jesus was making a comparison with the seemingly unending "halaka" of the Pharisees. That word refers to their lengthy commentary on the law, with hundreds of detailed regulations and details about non-essential items included. "How far was one permitted to walk on the sabbath" is an example.

You and I know that love of God and neighbor, the heart of Christ's "yoke," is qualitatively more difficult than observing dietary restrictions and sabbath directions. Especially if the neighbor seems placed here just to annoy us! We readily see what makes Christianity so difficult at times. Wishing that simple command would go away when we have to deal with a particularly annoying neighbor. How tough it is to remember that the Holy Spirit dwells in him/her when they persist in acting the way they do! G.K. Chesterton was "spot on" when he wrote: "Christianity has not been tried and found wanting. It has been found difficult and left untried."

Right here, in the heart of the summer vacation season, I believe the following definition of a good neighbor fits nicely. Nor do we need more detail. "A good neighbor is one who will watch your vacation slides all evening without telling you that he has been there too."
