

Dear People of Divine Savior and our Cherished Visitors:

This weekend, we ponder what we hope for in the future and what that means for the present. Three disciples, James, Peter and John, accompany Jesus on a trek up a high mountain. We know from our own experiences how spending time in the mountains can bring a renewed sense of awe at the majesty of God's creation. Looking out over vastly expansive stretches of land, we realize how blessed we are to be able to enjoy the wonderful handiwork of God our creator. These experiences can, at times, prompt us to make changes in the way that we are living. We might decide to fret less over stuff we have little or no control over. We might accept that we have not been putting our best efforts into our relationships. Surrounded in the mountains by amazing topography, we are often prompted to give thanks for these experiences as well as many others that occur day by day.

The Gospel states that Jesus was transfigured in that His face shone brightly and His clothes were white as light. Those who have experienced near-death experiences describe a similar kind of whiteness and glow. While Jesus' body changed, Moses and Elijah appear alongside Jesus. Moses is a symbol for the law that God gave His people as a guide to come to know the true nature of God. Elijah represented the prophets who called the people to live out the relationship that God had established with them. Much like when we experience something majestic, Peter tries awkwardly to reflect what it means for the three of them to witness these events. Impulsively, Peter wants to make three tents. As often is the case with Peter, he hadn't thought out his ideas before he uttered them. Building three tents put Jesus on the same level as Moses and Elijah, but as the three later realized Jesus took it upon Himself to be the new law and the prophet who would make known in His being the living, loving presence of God.

Peter's idea also was an attempt to freeze-frame the experience, most likely so that the three could continue to ponder such a vivid scene. We know that experiences of grandeur, peace, insight and awe in our lives are often very brief, which means that we need to be very attentive as they take place so that we can reflect on them later. Lent is such a time for us to imagine ourselves in the presence of Jesus. What does that feel like? Are we comfortable, or do we wish that we could hide parts of our lives that we are not thrilled about? Are we left speechless?

Considering the rest of the Gospel passage, we allow Jesus to remind us of who He is as a way for us to be reminded of who we are in God's eyes. In spending time with Jesus, coming to know Him intimately, we pray that we come to understand more fully how we want to live out more and more our identity as God's beloved. Through it all, we allow Jesus to touch us so that we can realize that despite whatever else is going on for us, we can feel accepted in love just as we are. Despite our fears and worries, we allow ourselves to be comforted by Jesus' saying to us with complete love, "do not be afraid." We, in turn, invite others to have similar experiences with Jesus.

FLU/CORONAVIRUS UPDATE

We have suspended the sharing of the Precious Blood until further notice due to the prevalence of the flu and onset of the coronavirus.

Those who are gluten intolerant, please be sure to let the presider know before Mass, so arrangements can be made for you to receive from the chalice.

We recommend against holding hands during the Lord's Prayer; for those who choose to, let us respect the wishes of those around us.

For the Sign of Peace, rather than shake hands, we encourage all parishioners to be creative in sharing a gesture of peace with a loving smile or holding our hands on our hearts as we say the words "Peace be with You".

Please go to the parish website for the Center for Disease Control's list of recommended preventative actions to prevent the spread of flu/coronavirus.

Please continue to pray for ALL who are ill, and those who care for them, that God's angels may surround them, and that they be held in the palm of His beautiful hand.
