Father's Column

Who Was St. Luke? (feast day: October 18) ...

From Butler's Lives of the Saints:

St. Luke, a physician at Antioch, and a painter, became a convert of St. Paul, and afterwards his fellow-laborer. He is best known to us as the historian of the New Testament. Though not an eye-witness of Our Lord's life, the Evangelist diligently gathered information from the lips of the apostles, and wrote, as he tells us, all things in order. The acts of the Apostles were written by this Evangelist as a sequel to his Gospel, bringing the history of the Church down to the first imprisonment of St. Paul at Rome. The humble historian never names himself, but by his occasional use of "we" for "they" we are able to detect his presence in the scenes which he describes. We thus find that he sailed with St. Paul and Silas from Troas to Macedonia; stayed behind apparently for seven years at Philippi, and, lastly, shared the shipwreck and perils of the memorable voyage to Rome. Here his own narrative ends, but from St. Paul's Epistles we learn that St. Luke was his faithful companion to the end. He died a martyr's death some time afterwards in Achaia (Greece).

A few other notes from Fr. Barone:

Matthew, Mark, and Luke are called the "synoptic" Gospels as they are very similar and thus they view (-optic) together (syn-) the life of Christ. Despite their similarities, they each have their own proper features. The Gospel Luke wrote is distinguished for several reasons. Firstly, it alone was written by a non-Jew. In terms of content, Matthew and Luke are the only Gospels with infancy narratives. The former focuses on St. Joseph; the latter on the Blessed Mother. Luke has eighteen parables not included in the other Gospels, including the prodigal son and the rich man and Lazarus. In the Passion narrative, Luke alone mentions Our Lord sweating blood during the agony in the garden as well as the Lord and Peter looking at each other following the latter's third denial.

St. Luke, pray for us!

Today's Readings

First Reading — If he gives his life as an offering for sin ... the will of the Lord shall be accomplished through him. Through his suffering, my servant shall justify many, and their guilt he shall bear ... (Isaiah 53:10-11).

Second Reading — For we do not have a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses. So let us confidently approach the throne of grace to receive mercy and to find grace for timely help (Hebrews 4:14-16).

Gospel — Whoever wishes to be first among you will be the slave of all. For the Son of Man did not come to be served but to serve and to give his life as a ransom for many (Mark 10:35-45).
