Father's Column

Excerpts from: "The Communion Rail and Complementarity" By Rev. Jerry J. Pokorsky

The traditional Communion rail has functional and sacramental purposes. It distinguishes the sanctuary from the nave and the priest from the people. The architectural logic of the Communion rail symbolizes the sacred ("set apart") and ministerial priesthood with the priest offering Mass as a mediator in Christ the Head. The priest, as male, images Jesus as the Divine Bridegroom in union with His beloved Church. And he feeds the Bride of Christ at the Communion rail, from the "table of the Lord." Bride and Bridegroom are distinct but never divorced.

The Communion rail accentuates the sanctuary as the "Holy of Holies" hearkening back to Jewish worship. The Mosaic Law dictates the preparations of an Old Testament priest – cleanliness, vestments, offerings – for entry into the "Holy of Holies."

The Sacrifice of Christ inaugurates the New and Everlasting Covenant and every Mass re-presents His Cross and Resurrection. Even though the Temple curtain was torn in two when Jesus gave up His spirit (Mt. 27:51), the distinction between priest and people (and sanctuary and nave) still remains.

Paradoxically and beautifully, the Communion rail also invites the people to confidently step up to the very edge of the Holy of Holies in reverence. Priest and people, head and body, sanctuary and nave: all complementing the other in the one worshipping Church.

Faith formation depends on essential catechetical and theological training. But faith is enriched by our encounter with the externals of the liturgy in various forms – including the sacred architecture.

When there isn't a Communion rail, the people approach the Communion station and, after receiving Communion, hurriedly depart. A panoramic devotional view of a beautiful sanctuary, like the splendor of decorations adorning a wedding feast, is thus unlikely. The reception of Communion is individualistic, not communal. The priest stands still distributing the Hosts; the people hustle to and fro.

Restoring the Communion rail to its rightful place in churches has important theological & phenomenological implications. A priest senses the Communion rail and feels he is set apart from the assembly, even as he engages the faithful in prayer. He is more aware of his role as a mediator in Christ in prayer and worship. His role as a spiritual father becomes clear as he emerges from the Holy of Holies to distribute Communion.

The Communion rail not only links the priest and faithful to Jewish worship, but it is also a beautiful architectural symbol that accentuates the harmonious and complementary relationship between priest and people, between Christ and His Church. Today's Readings

First Reading: This is the blood of the covenant that the LORD has made with you ... (Exodus 24:3-8)

Second Reading: Christ is the mediator of a new covenant (Hebrews 9:11-15).

Gospel: While they were eating the Passover meal, Jesus took bread, said the blessing, broke it, gave it to them, and said, "Take it; this is my body." Then he took a cup, gave thanks, and gave it to them, and they all drank from it. He said to them, "This is my blood of the covenant, which will be shed for many (Mark 14:12-16, 22-26).

Precious Blood

On this solemnity we focus our attention on the Body and Blood of Christ. We listen to the story of the renewal of the old covenant, which Moses sealed by splashing the blood of animals on the altar of sacrifice, as well as on the people. Jesus, whose blood is the blood of the new covenant, shed that precious blood on the cross, saving us from sin and promising us everlasting life. Blood is the life source that courses through our bodies. The precious blood of Christ is the life source for our spirits.
