

The gift of speech – Communicating with each other

I cannot speak in tongues, but I can smile, nod and give a hug when appropriate.

It is easy to be forlorn and indeed, when we are confronted with how some people are suffering, one can feel their pain if we take the time out from being cosy and self-absorbed in our own well-being.

We often find ourselves asking the question: Where is God while people are struggling with ill health and mental illness during this difficult time in our lives?

Maybe we should ask ourselves what can I do in this situation. Perhaps it can be in “Deeds not Words.”

Sometimes I can't do as I would like to, but I can pray for those who are in need of prayers. Many hands raised to God in pray makes a huge difference to everyone's well-being.

A perceptive parishioner quoted “Prayer is the most important conversation of your day.

Take it to God before you take it to anyone else!” Good advice, take honesty and negative feelings to the Lord who can argue against the prophets of doom in our lives.

Praying is indeed Doing.

Anonymous

