THE BANQUET IS READY

Jesus was attending a meal, and reclining at the table. Some of those around Him were simply curious, others were ardent followers, but some at the table were His enemies.

Notice how Jesus responded to the eyes of opponents. He did not embarrass them, or attack them. He did not leave the table, even though it was awkward and uncomfortable. Instead, Jesus seized the initiative of that awkward spotlight moment to broadcast His message in word and deed. With all eyes upon Him, Jesus healed a man of sickness. And then He followed up with a set of sayings and parables to illustrate truths about the Kingdom of God. In other words, Jesus stayed on a consistent course with His character and mission. He did not allow the intent of others to distract Him from His central focus.

Jesus knew what we must learn in these tense moments. We can not control the thoughts, intentions, or actions of others. We can only do something about our own thoughts, intent, and acts. So do not become obsessed with the courting of public opinion, or the conversion of the opponent. Quite honestly, our worst fears and assumptions about them are often over blown anyway. We are not really being watched as often as we feel anxious that we are being watched. Not everyone is talking about us after our failures, nor do they remember those failures as long as we do. And not nearly as many people wish us harm as we may think. So next time your wife tries to lure you out on the dance floor, go ahead. No one is watching you dance anyway. If anything, they were wondering why you were hugging the wall.

Come, come to the table. The eyes of God are upon you. And the hand of God welcomes you. The blessings of God provide for you. With humble and grateful hearts and hands, receive the banquet of God. May your table manners here in worship spill over to other tables in our lives, and prepare us for that great heavenly banquet to come.

Enjoy the feast.

Deacon Mike
A SUCCESSFUL LIFE

I had not seen George Sullivan in a while, but was able to visit him recently. He and I have stayed in touch through emails since a formidable health situation befell him two Christmases ago. I was really delighted when I knocked on the door, George opened it, and greeted me with a hug.

George, who is an above the knee amputee, and I often reminisce about our Catholic high school and Catholic college days, continue to discover how many friends we have in common, and, most importantly, share the happenings of our growing families. As modest a man as I have ever met, I learned from others the heroic military career that George had as a Marine. Injured on a rescue mission, George’s courage and determination was recognized when awarded the Navy Cross, our nation’s second highest military award for valor. In surviving those life threatening wounds he received in Viet Nam, George was able to develop a way of life that has made him a solid family man, a productive entrepreneur, and valuable member of each community he serves.

Ten years ago the government decided to develop an oral history of the Viet Nam War, and George was interviewed about his thoughts about his disability and was told that his recollections would wind up in the Library of Congress. Pretty neat, he thought. One can only imagine his elation when his quote appeared on the recently dedicated American Veterans Disabled for Life Memorial in Washington, D.C. Now George’s words will inspire generations to come:

“Yes, I wished things would have worked out a little better for me, but I did come home alive and had a fairly successful life.”

A man of great faith, George now concentrates on restoring his health and enchanting his three grandchildren who were able to see the panel that bears the words of their grandfather on a recent Memorial visit. But George has been in the inspiration business for years, as he deflects admiration and promotes the virtues of his Catholic faith, his hope for our nation, and his charity to one and all.

People like George Sullivan demonstrate that God never gives us more than we can handle. At one time or another we all have, “...wished things would have worked out a little better...”, but, with God always at our side, we can make the best of whatever situation comes along.

If you don’t believe me, just ask George.

PRAYER

Loving and Generous Father, thank You for putting people like George Sullivan in our lives, so we can realize we have what it takes to survive what we think is something insurmountable. This we ask in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. Amen.

Beau Maher
