

Book Review: “True Radiance, Finding Grace in the Second Half of Life” by Lisa Mladinich.

Some of you may have been aware that the West Middlesex Family of Parishes had a “Women's Virtual Book Club” in the fall. It was a great book, and the author attended the last session.

A few of the women have written a book review in order to provide some insights that may encourage you to read the book...

Margaret Adams wrote this review:

The author of True Radiance opens up about her struggles and her journey to faith in God and helps the reader to appreciate the many gifts and blessings they have received through the years. Lisa Mladinich, a Catholic wife and mother, has much wisdom and insights about what it means for a woman to attain her best in life, focusing on the inner treasure rather than the outward appearance. I found her many stories, quotes and references to scriptures to be inspiring. I know that I will enjoy reading it repeatedly as there was so much 'nuggets' of information to absorb in the first reading.

Bobbie Vens wrote this review:

True Radiance is a very informative book on all issues in life that we go through at one time or another. Being able to share openly with my faith ladies helped me seek the Lord more profoundly and call and rely on the Holy Spirit. Communicating together with the other ladies gave me a different perspective on how I see others
