Bishop Janak a 1st for DOV

JANET JONES

He was among the first priests to be ordained in the Diocese of Victoria, now he is the first priest from the diocese, since it was created in 1982, to become a bishop.

Bishop Gary Janak’s episcopal ordination will take place at St. Mark the Evangelist Catholic Church in San Antonio on April 20 and he will begin serving the Archdiocese of San Antonio as auxiliary bishop.

Bishop Janak has chosen the episcopal motto: “Give to your servant a listening heart,” from 1 Kings.

“That’s what I want to do as a bishop,” he said, and having the heart of a counselor, he knows the importance of listening before speaking. “If I speak before I listen, it’s about me. So I have to listen more.”

In some ways, his new role will be like a homecoming. He attended seminary in San Antonio and Rev. Michael Boulette was his spiritual advisor. During Janak’s priestly ordination, Boulette was one of the priests who laid his hands on Janak’s head invoking the Holy Spirit and conveying that special blessing.

Now Boulette, also an auxiliary bishop for the Archdiocese of San Antonio, will witness Janak’s episcopal ordination 33 years later, and again will lay his hands on Janak’s head and convey a blessing. Together they will serve the people of the archdiocese with Archbishop Gustavo Garcia-Siller.

The archbishop called Janak “a great gift from the Diocese of Victoria.”

When asked what he thinks the biggest strength Janak will bring to the archdiocese, he said, “The main thing is his pastoral experience. … enriched by the other roles of leadership.” To the Diocese of Victoria as a whole, he said, “You trained him well.”

Bishop Brendan Cahill is also happy that Janak has been selected and says it’s a reminder that we are part of a universal Church. And, though Janak’s designation as bishop was a surprise, Bishop Cahill was not exactly shocked. Janak’s years of experience and leadership have made him a promising candidate. “I can’t think of a better person than Father Gary,” Cahill said.

Bishop Gary W. Janak

Not a day goes by that Deacon Larry Hoelscher doesn’t think about Christina, his 18-year-old daughter who was killed in a car accident 20 years ago.

Hoelscher, who ministers at St. Philip the Apostle Catholic Church in El Campo, and his wife, Patricia, who is a spiritual director for the Emmaus Center, are leading a grief support retreat for parents who, like them, have lost a child. The retreat, created through the Office of Family Evangelization at the Diocese of Victoria, is 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, March 13, at Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Ganado.

Anyone who has lost a child at any age, no matter how long ago, is encouraged to attend. What they can expect, according to Deacon Hoelscher, is to hear presentations by clergy and other parents who have had the experience of losing a child.

See Parents who suffer death of a child are not alone, pg. 12

Registration for the retreat is free and required in advance so the organizers can plan for lunch and materials. There is an online form on the Diocese of Victoria website under the Office of Family Evangelization or call Patricia Hoelscher, 979-257-9984, or Deacon Larry Hoelscher, 979-578-3934.

Dear Brothers and Sisters,

On my calendar I’ve started to include the Tuesday morning meetings of the praesidium of the Legion of Mary at the Cathedral. My decision to once again become a spiritual director for a local chapter of the Legion of Mary came out of my prayer on the Ignatian retreat I took in January.

One of the exercises in the retreat is called writing a personal “election,” or “choice,” coming out of days praying about the ministry of Jesus. Each day, for 30 days, I spent five one-hour prayer sessions meditating on different scenes – following the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius (“Draw Me Into Your Friendship. The Spiritual Exercises: A Literal Translation and a Contemporary Reading,” David L. Fleming, S.J., The Institute of Jesuit Sources, St. Louis, 1996).

The prayer was really intense, and I thank God for the prayers and support of so many while I was totally disconnected from TV, cell phone and the outside world.

The first part of the retreat focused on the choice between good and evil, the reality of Satan and hell and reflection on my personal sinfulness and the sin of the world. From there, the different prayer periods focused on God’s plan for the salvation of people, leading to the choice of Mary to say “yes” to being the mother of the Savior. Then, step by step, the prayer periods walked through the childhood, young adulthood and the ministry of Jesus along the Sea of Galilee and in Jerusalem.

Experiences like this led to the writing of my election:

“Mary, I am all yours, I will go where you send me. Sweetest Jesus, I hide within Your wounds – grant me knowledge of and rejection of all worldliness and vanity. As a sign of my election I will ask Deacon Luan if there is a praesidium in need of a spiritual director for the Legion of Mary.”

May you and your families be blessed with the merciful love of Jesus in this Lenten season, may we be brave in bringing this mercy to the world, and may we be united in keeping one another in prayer.

Father Huehlefeld named chancellor

Bishop Brendan Cahill on Friday announced that Father Matthew Huehlefeld would become chancellor beginning April 6. He will take the place of Bishop Gary Janak, who was recently appointed as auxiliary bishop for the Archdiocese of San Antonio.

“In addition to the continuation of his duties as pastor of St. Joseph, Yoakum, and its mission of St. Ann’s in Hochheim, and judicial vicar of the Diocese of Victoria, I am pleased to announce that Father Matthew Huehlefeld has been appointed as Chancellor for the Diocese of Victoria,” Bishop Cahill stated.

DOV welcomes new face, new position

Aldo Camacho joined the Diocese of Victoria on Feb. 22, as coordinator of the Hispanic Ministry for the Diocese of Victoria.

Under the direct supervision of Justin Reyes, director of Family Evangelization, Camacho is responsible for the administrative support of the daily inquiries, training and liaison support related to the Hispanic community and ministry.

Camacho is originally from Chihuahua, Mexico, and has a strong Hispanic culture background. He has more than 10 years of experience in parish ministry with youth, young adults and adults. He has a passion for teaching the Catholic faith and seeking ways of encouraging others to grow and share their faith. Aldo holds a master’s degree in theological studies from the University of the Incarnate Word, Mexico, and has a strong Hispanic culture background.

Front desk coordinator accepts new post

Angela Martinez, who has served the Diocese of Victoria for five and a half years at the chancery office, is leaving her position to become the new assistant at the Spiritual Renewal Center.

As the front desk coordinator, she is usually the first face people see when they come into the chancery. She has also accomplished a long list of duties in her role at the front desk.

She started her new post on Monday, March 1. Her direct supervisor is Matthew Boyle and her email address will remain as amartinez@victoriadiocese.org. Her new phone number is (361) 572-0836 and extension of 3223.

The DOV is currently looking for applicants to fill the position of front desk coordinator. To read the job description, visit www.victoriadiocese.org/employment-opportunities-1.

Please remember in prayer the priests of the Diocese of Victoria,

God our Father, thank you for our Priests and for calling the Diocese of Victoria Seminarians to prepare for priesthood and grant them the grace to grow closer to You through daily prayer. Help them to form their personality as a credible witness to others. Bless them while they study Your Word and the teachings of the Church and give them a generous heart to serve Your people. Amen.

Please remember in prayer the priests of the Diocese of Victoria, who died during the month of March:

Rev. Msgr. Michael O’Shaughnessy 03/02/2013
Rev. Gabriel Franks 03/19/2018
Rev. Daniel Giorgi 03/22/2007

DOV welcomes new face, new position

St. Thomas in Houston.

“Follow me and I will make you fishers of men.”
Matthew 4:18-22

Richard Barfield is in a Pastoral Assignment at Our Lady of the Gulf in Port Lavaca. His birthday is March 8. Write to Richard at: Our Lady of the Gulf Church, 415 W. Austin St., Port Lavaca, TX 77979.
EDITOR’S NOTE: Father Charles Kram wrote this sermon he titled, “Death, the Gateway to a Better Life,” for the fifth Sunday of Lent, Cycle B.

God had surrounded us with so many reminders of our mortality. We see the buds of spring gradually growing to maturity, then harvest time and, finally, the dead of winter. We see the newborn baby growing into childhood, then youth, then adulthood and then, in the fullness of old age, departing from this world, leaving everything behind. It seems so futile even to be born.

But life goes on. The cycle of life repeats itself. Every generation dies out completely and passes on to the next the gift of life it has received, along with everything else it has inherited from the past.

In the world of the spirit, these things also are true because, at death, the life of the individual is not ended, but is merely changed. If we have died in God’s friendship, our life will be forever happy. We will never more be subject to temptation and sin. We will never more experience weakness and illness or sorrow and pain. We will have only the joy and vigor of the springtime of eternal life.

On the Mount of Transfiguration, Jesus showed himself to his disciples in his glory. In those brief moments, Peter, James and John tasted immortality and we so thrilled that they did not want to leave, for Jesus had shown them what life would be like after the Resurrection. When our own mortal bodies are raised to life on the last day, we will be like Him in glory.

But, first, we must all pass through the mystery of death.

Death has been compared to the birth of a child. Before a baby is born, it feels safe and secure where it is. It is never hungry or thirsty or cold; never uncomfortable or in need of anything. It cannot imagine a better world and does not want to leave its secure little home. But once it is born and has heard voices and music and the songs of birds and has seen lights and colors and has been held in loving arms, it would never want to go back into that confined and dark old space.

In spite of the tribulations we must endure in this life, we are also reluctant to leave the security of our earthly home. We fear the unknown. We do not want to face the strange and unfamiliar new existence of another world. But once we have entered into glory and have seen the face of God, we would in no way wish ever to come back to this vale of tears, for it is beyond our imagination, what the Heavenly Father has prepared for those who love Him.

I have met several persons who have had a near-death experience. They told me that they had left their bodies and had seen a great light and had felt so much joy and peace that they did not want to come back. They also told me that they were not afraid of death anymore.

When we see ourselves growing old and see the control of the things we have loved the most gradually slipping away from us, we could become anxious or discouraged, or we could commit ourselves ever more fully to everything the Lord Jesus still expects of us.

Sometimes we ask ourselves, “Do I have to do this?” or “Would this be a sin?” Why not ask ourselves instead, “What would Jesus want me to do?” And if some trial tempts us to ask, “Why me, Lord?” we might ask instead, “Why NOT me, Lord? After all, I am one of your followers.”

St. Teresa of Avila once asked Jesus why he let his friends suffer so much. His reply was, “It is because I love them.” Teresa then said to Him, “No wonder you have so few friends.”

We do not like to suffer, but Jesus arrived at the glory of the Resurrection only through the cross, and so must we.

Lord Jesus, thank you for numbering us among your followers. Help us in all our struggles, to keep our hopes always fixed on you. Grant that when you return accompanied by your angels and their trumpet blasts to judge the world, the time for our glorifications may be at hand. Amen.
To find Jesus, look no further than the suffering you know

Last month we reflected on Lent as a time of penance and practicing care of one another as we continue observing guidelines to safeguard one another. Meanwhile, we seek the Jesus, who said, “Whatsoever you do …” an excellent practice at this time and at all times.

During Lent, one of my favorite quotes is, “You must climb Calvary to find me,” the message given by Jesus to our foundress of the Incarnate Word Sisters, Jeanne Chezard de Matel. Jeanne had a life-long quest to find Jesus, the Incarnate Word. Much of her searching – and writing – focused on His Passion, including His struggle to climb Calvary.

Now each of us has his/her Calvary that we must climb to find Jesus. For some of us, it may be suffering the loss of a loved one. For others, it may be sickness, financial difficulties or some personal tragedy.

For those of us who are still wondering what to do, Jesus Himself tells us that we can find Him by feeding the hungry and giving drink to the thirsty and so on. Hence, Calvary is the anguish of the parent who is unable to feed or properly shelter his or her children; it is the bewilderment of those who cannot find meaning in existence and in the longing of those who are spiritually starving in this time of pandemic.

What can we do to help assuage this physical and spiritual hunger of these suffering persons and, in so doing, find Jesus?

Jesus goes on to tell us that we can also find him in the stranger, in the sick and in the imprisoned. Who are these strangers who find themselves on the Calvary of unfamiliar surroundings, bereft of friends, in need of someone to welcome them and, thereby, welcome Jesus? Can we recognize Jesus and reach out to the undocumented immigrant or the outsider in our midst?

Can we see Jesus in the sick and all those struggling with pain, loneliness, and discouragement, needing our prayers, our support. These are the suffering Jesus. Are we willing to help them by our caring friendship, thereby finding Him, in such circumstances?

Let us, therefore, journey with and – as much as possible, during COVID-19, and into the future – alleviate the sufferings of the hungry, the thirsty, the homeless, the naked, the stranger, the sick and the imprisoned. Then, in accompanying them on their climb to Calvary, we will encounter Jesus.

May all of us find Him this Lent.
Youth and leaders recognized during Scout Sunday

VICTORIA – Our Lady of Victory’s Cub Scout Pack 364 and Boy Scout Troop 364 celebrated Scout Sunday on Feb. 21 at the Cathedral of Our Lady of Victory. Bishop-elect Gary Janak was the celebrant.

Various religious groups created special emblem programs to help the youth grow stronger in their faith. During the Mass, the awards for these programs were presented.

Jake Kovar, Henry Neisser and Sean Novak received the Agnus Dei medal, designed specifically for Catholic scouts in the first and second grades. During this time, the boys are preparing to receive the sacraments of reconciliation and First Communion. The two sacraments are highlighted in the Agnus Dei program.

Isaac Bonorden, Henry Neisser, John Novak, Miguel Livar, Isaiah Garcia and Alex Dickson received the Light of Christ medal. The Light of Christ program helps Catholic Wolf Scouts in the second grade develop a personal relationship with Jesus with the hope that they will come to see Jesus as a real person and friend.

Boy Scout Troop 364 Scoutmaster Roger Lawrence was given the Bronze Pelican award to recognize individuals for their outstanding contributions to the development of Catholic youth in the Boy Scouts. Lawrence’s contributions include promoting religious scouting awards, observance of Scout Sunday, assisting with the Cub Scout retreat, the Ten Commandments Hike, being a lector and a member of the Knights of Columbus.

Janak, the rector of the Cathedral of Our Lady of Victory who has recently been appointed as auxiliary bishop in San Antonio, received the St. George emblem. It is given to members of the laity and clergy, scouts and non-scouts alike, who have made significant contributions to the spiritual development of Catholic youths through scouting. He has served as a counselor and moderator in religious emblems; encouraged other clergy support of scouting religious programs; celebrated Mass at scout retreats and campouts; and maintains a Catholic-Chartered Scouting Unit at Our Lady of Victory (continuous since 1958).

“These young men make us very proud by showing us that God comes first in the lives of our scouts,” Charles Bonorden, Assistant Scout Master for Troop 364 stated. About Lawrence and Janak he said, “The OLV scouting program has been blessed to have these two gentlemen involved in the spiritual formation of our scouts as we strive to turn them into faithful and devoted men of God.”
St. Joseph’s new church organ honors Moulton’s Evelyn and Frank J. Darilek

By BOBBY HORECKA
Special to the Lighthouse

MOULTON – Members of St. Joseph’s Catholic Church recognized two long-serving Moulton parishioners and their family’s warm generosity when, in a special ceremony just after the homily during Mass on Feb. 7, the Rev. Gabriel Maison began telling the story behind the new church organ.

“I’m sure some of you might remember about a year ago when our organ simply stopped playing one day, right in the middle of the Mass,” Father Gabriel began.

Slowly, heads began bobbing up and down in recognition of the day Father Gabriel mentioned, mostly among the ladies in attendance. The men, most of them stoic and poker-faced, never let on one way or another. Of course, it was also Super Bowl Sunday, so their thoughts likely elsewhere.

“It simply stopped working,” the priest continued. “I didn’t know what we would do. It was a big burden, losing that organ.”

One of the parishioners graciously set up a smaller, portable version so the music continued. “I didn’t know what we would do. It was a big burden, losing that organ.”

One of the parishioners graciously set up a smaller, portable version so the music could continue at their services. Appreciated, absolutely, but it wasn’t anything like before.

Church organs, for those who may not know, tend to be rather pricey. Most models — of the size that the Moulton church would need — start with a four-digit dollar figure and only go up from there.

Plus, St. Joseph’s just began a major church repair project right about then. There wasn’t much spending money about that wasn’t already earmarked elsewhere.

Then there was that awful coronavirus in 2020. Although it may not have shown up yet — roughly a year ago when the old organ finally played out — it was simply a matter of weeks before it would.

Getting a replacement organ then probably seemed next to impossible, especially after churches statewide got shut down for several weeks straight last year.

So, the weeks soon stretched to months, with no ready end in sight.

Then one day, the phone rang.

“This man calls me out of nowhere and tells me he wants to buy the church a new organ,” Father Gabriel told Sunday’s congregation. “I couldn’t believe it. Really, I had tears in my eyes as we hung up.”

The caller was none other than Moulton native Robert Frank Darilek, a hometown boy who left for the San Antonio city lights some years ago, in fact, as one of the KC’s head cooks at church picnics and other events.

Frank died on a Wednesday, finally reunited with his late bride of more than 69 years, Evelyn, who passed away on June 11, 2016, at the age of 88.

“It’s all about my mother and father, really,” son Robert said. “I wanted to do something in their honor to remember the legacy they left behind. When I heard that the church needed a new organ, I just knew it was a perfect fit for them.”

Perfect, as Robert put it, because while his father’s funeral may have sparked the idea for the donation, it was his mother who inspired a true love for church music and the organ.

Because back in 1976, the Darileks told us, their mother, Evelyn, almost 50, decided to learn the instrument so she could fill in for the regular church organist, who was moving away from Moulton later that year. She learned everything from how to read the notes to how to play them on the organ, all by means of a few how-to music books and almost constant practice.

“She was self-taught,” her children said proudly. She learned to play well enough that she took over as St. Joseph’s lead organist, a post she held for many years.

It was her constant dedication that continues to inspire her children, even after she is gone.

“They both always gave so much of themselves, their time, and their money,” Robert Darilek said. “This is our small way of honoring their commitment. It is our hope that they will be remembered here in Moulton for many years to come.”

The late Frank and Evelyn Darilek, both lifelong St. Joseph’s parishioners and dedicated community servants, recently inspired their children to donate a new organ the Moulton Catholic Church. They were honored in a special ceremony Sunday for the generous gift, given in memory of their parents. It’s SNOW FUN

Snow doesn’t happen often in South Texas, and it did cause its share of trouble on the week of Feb. 14. But when you are young – or just a kid at heart – it’s time to play. These pictures show the children from our Catholic schools making the most of it.

In the photo above, Bishop Brendan Cahill leads a blessing of the soon-to-open Bethlehem Maternity Home during its Feb. 25 open house. Lisa Howard, the director of the new home said, “We will be welcoming the moms, hopefully, in a few weeks.” Below, Emily Benavides of St. John Bosco in Vanderbilt and Father Jasper Liggio, pastor of St. Michael in Cuero pose with Bishop Cahill after receiving trophies for their participation in the first-ever Walking with Moms in Need virtual 5K, coordinated by the Diocese of Victoria’s Office of Pro-Life Ministry. All donations and entry fees received went directly to the maternity home, a creation of the Gabriel Project of the Crossroads to help women in crisis pregnancies who need stable housing. Every deanery in the diocese was represented in the 5K and $4,475 was raised. St. Michael Catholic Church in Cuero raised the most money and St. John Bosco in Vanderbilt had the largest number of participants.
HALLETTSVILLE – As part of Catholic Schools Week, Sacred Heart Catholic School students in grades five through 12 participated in the Catholic Knowledge Bowl on Feb. 5.

This annual event tests students’ memories of religion lessons learned and challenges them with questions they have not yet studied. There were three rounds with 20 questions each, read by Monsignor John Peters, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, as teacher Geralyn Klimitchek served as timekeeper. Sister Emiliana Grafe composed the questions.

First-place winners in high school, with 54 points were Trenton Kraatz, Ethan Jacobs, Trey Ridgeway and Joseph Goodwyne. Seniors Beth Ventura and Katy Shank, with juniors Victoria Kraatz and Dallas Layton took second place with 51 points. Answering 48 questions correctly for third place were Quade Henneke, Garrett Ridge- way, John Wysocki and Brett Sestak.

In the junior high division, Hudson Kutac, Lance Barton, Sam Bludau and Andrew Steffek took the gold with 47 points. Kaycee Schindler, Brianna Clark, Karley Kostelnik, and Annika Brooks came in second. Third place went to Kenzie Chance, Jillian Whited, Lacie Olivarez, and Alli Clark with 45 points. Their team name, “The Whales That Ate Jonah,” also won for cleverest/funniest team name with a Christian connection.

Sacred Heart announces winners in Catholic Knowledge Bowl
Mi elección: ‘Iré a donde tú me envíes’

Mensaje del Pastor

Por Obispo Brendan Cahill

Queridos hermanos y hermanas,

En mi calendario he comenzando a incluir las reuniones de los martes por la mañana del praesidium de la Legión de María en la Catedral. Mi decisión de convertirme una vez más en director espiritual de un capítulo local de la Legión de María surgió de mi oración en el retiro Ignaciano de enero. Uno de los ejercicios del retiro se llamaba escribir una “elección” personal que surge de los días de oración por el ministerio de Jesús. Cada día, durante treinta días, pasé cinco sesiones de una hora en oración meditando en diferentes escenas, siguiendo los Ejercicios Espirituales de San Ignacio (“Atraeme a tu Amistad. Los Ejercicios Espirituales: Una Traducción Literal y Una Lectura Contemporánea”, David L. Fleming, SJ, Instituto de Fuentes Jesuitas, St. Louis, 1996). La oración fue realmente intensa y agradezco a Dios por las oraciones y el apoyo de tantos mientras estaba totalmente desconectado de la televisión, el teléfono y el mundo exterior.

La primera parte del retiro se centró en la elección entre el bien y el mal, la realidad de Satanás y el infierno y la reflexión sobre mi pecaminosidad personal y el pecado del mundo. A partir de ahí los diferentes períodos de oración se centraron en el plan de Dios para la salvación de las personas que llevaron a la elección de María para decir “sí” para ser la madre del Salvador. Luego, paso a paso, los períodos de oración recorrieron la infancia, la juventud y el ministerio de Jesús a lo largo del Mar de Galilea y en Jerusalén.

En uno de estos días con el ministerio de Jesús sentí la presencia de toda la gente de la Diócesis de Victoria en el Sermón de la Montaña. He estado tratando de pensar en cómo explicarle esto, pero sentí la presencia de Jesús mismo predicando Mateo 5 a todos nosotros y nos envió a traer sanidad, esperanza y verdad al mundo. También sentí a su madre María estar cerca de él, ya que estuvo presente durante todo su ministerio. En mi mente fui a cada parroquia y misión y oré: “Bendito seas…” Pude ver muchos de sus rostros y hablé con ustedes por su nombre.

Poco después de esta experiencia de oración tuve mi encuentro diario con mi director espiritual. Ella mencionó que alguien me había enviado flores y un paquete. El paquete incluía un ramo espiritual de la diócesis de Victoria y muchos de los ministerios que apoyo. Abrumado, le dije a mi director que esto parecía confirmar la sensación de ser enviado. Además, mirando hacia atrás en mi vida, tengo la sensación de haber sido enviado por María para traer a Jesús al mundo.

Experiencias como esta llevaron a escribir mi elección:
“María, soy todo tuyo, iré a donde tú me envíes. Dulce Jesús, me escondo entre Tus llagas, concédeame el conocimiento y el rechazo de toda mundanalidad y vanidad. Como señal de mi elección, le preguntaré al diácono Luan si hay un praesidium que necesite un director espiritual para la Legión de María”

¿Que ustedes y sus familias sean bendecidos con el amor misericordioso de Jesús en esta temporada de Cuaresma, que seamos valientes al llevar esta misericordia al mundo y que estemos unidos para mantenernos unos a otros en oración.

Diócesis contrae coordinador para el ministerio hispano

Aldo Camacho se unió a la Diócesis de Victoria el 22 de febrero, como coordinador del Ministerio Hispano de la diócesis.

Con la supervisión directa de Justin Reyes, director de Evangelización Familiar, Camacho es responsable del apoyo administrativo de las consultas diarias, capacitación y apoyo de enlace relacionado con la comunidad y el ministerio hispano.

Camacho es originario de Chihuahua, México, con un fuerte trasfondo de cultura hispana. Tiene más de 10 años de experiencia en el ministerio parroquial con jóvenes, adultos jóvenes y adultos. El es apasionado de enseñar la fe católica y buscar formas de animar a otros a crecer y compartir su fe. Camacho tiene una maestría en estudios teológicos de la Universidad de St. Thomas en Houston.

Dijo que está emocionado de unirse a la diócesis para colaborar con otros en el ministerio a las comunidades hispanas y a todo el pueblo de Dios.

“Estoy muy contento de poder trabajar directamente con la comunidad Hispana de la diócesis de Victoria. Es un gran honor el poder compartir los dones y talentos que Dios me ha dado con todos ustedes. Mi misión es la de seguir construyendo puentes, los cuales la misma diócesis ya ha comenzado a cimentar, para llevar a Cristo a todos, incluyendo a aquellos que hablan otros idiomas. Estoy muy contento con esta oportunidad y trabajaré arduamente para ayudar a educar y formar a más líderes hispanos. De esta manera, ayudar a darle a nuestra comunidad Hispana un sentido de pertenencia y aceptación en nuestra diócesis”.

Sacerdote del DOV nombrado obispo de la Arquidiócesis de San Antonio

El padre Gary Janak, sacerdote de la Diócesis de Victoria durante 33 años que actualmente se desempeña como pastor / rector de la Catedral de Nuestra Señora de la Victoria, canciller de la diócesis y director ejecutivo del Centro Emaús, ha sido nombrado obispo auxiliar de la Arquidiócesis de San Antonio.

El anuncio se hizo el 15 de febrero y su ordenación episcopal se llevará a cabo el 20 de abril en la Iglesia Católica San Marcos Evangelista en San Antonio.

El padre Matthew Huehlefeld, párroco de St. Joseph en Yoakum y vicario judicial de la diócesis ha sido nombrado nuevo canciller de la diócesis a partir del 6 de abril.
Parents who suffer death of a child are not alone

Deacon Hoelscher said he and Patricia have been called on many times to help comfort others who have suffered the loss of a child. When called on they would go visit the parents. He would often hear them say, “Help me.” He said he tells them, “I can’t give you the answers that you’re looking for.” But he lets them know he’s there for them and that what they need to find is peace.

“I just tried to find peace in the smallest increments of time,” he said. First a moment, then a minute, later a day, and so on.

Deacon Hoelscher stressed the importance of offering comfort, not just at the time of a death, but perhaps months later when the loneliness can be the worst.

He also said he is aware that many marriages do not survive the loss of a child. He said grief is overwhelming and no one grieves in the same way. He learned first-hand that you cannot assume your spouse feels the same way, and that husbands and wives need to be sensitive to each other’s struggles and feelings.

After their daughter died, Deacon Hoelscher said, others who had experienced the death of a child would make it a point to speak to them and tell them that they had suffered a loss, too. He said of parents who have lost children: “You kind of become part of a group.”

The Rev. Kirby Hlavaty, pastor of Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary Church in Ganado, is serving as a spiritual director for the retreat. He has done retreats like this before, but said this is the first time the Diocese has organized a grief support retreat.

In the past year, it has become even more difficult for many to grieve in the way they normally would because of restrictions that the pandemic has brought about. “From my perspective, the way in which people grieve now has changed. We’re having to chart our path through grief differently.”

Justin Reyes, director of the Office of Family Evangelization for the diocese said Father Kirby’s involvement will help make the retreat a success.

“Father Kirby is a huge blessing given his retreat experience, spiritual direction expertise and willingness to help,” Reyes said. “He is so generous in the many ways he has served people all around the diocese.”

Having Father Kirby host the retreat in Ganado is another blessing Reyes is counting. “We were hoping for a centrally located site for this outreach, and when we looked at the map, Ganado was one place that came to mind. Father Kirby seemed to be a perfect fit pastorally, so we decided to ask him and were so glad he said yes. God clearly has a plan for this ministry and brought all the pieces together – the Hoelschers, Ganado and Father Kirby.

A Prayer for Lent

(From Catholic Rural Life online resources)

DEAR Lord, we are now in the holy season of Lent. We begin to realize anew that these are the days of salvation; these are the acceptable days. We know that we are all sinners. We know that in many things we have all offended Your infinite majesty. We know that sin destroys Your life in us as a drought withers the leaves and chokes the life from the land, leaving an arid, dusty desert.

Help us now, Lord, in our feeble attempts to make up for past sin. Bless our efforts with the rich blessing of Your grace. Make us realize ever more our need of penance and of mortification. Help us to see, in our ordinary difficulties and duties, in the trials and temptations of every day, the best opportunity of making up for past infidelities.

Every day we are so often reminded in field and wood, in sky and stream, of Your own boundless generosity to us. Help us to realize that You are never outdone in generosity, and that the least thing we do for You will be rewarded, full measure, pressed down, shaken together, and flowing over.

Then we shall see, in our own souls, how the desert can blossom, and the dry and wasted land can bring forth the rich, useful fruit that was expected of it from the beginning. Amen.
Change is constant, but God is steadfast

On the Table
By Justin Reyes

Monday, Feb. 15, brought exciting news for our diocese and many within and beyond its bounds, as Father Gary Janak was named an auxiliary bishop for the Archdiocese of San Antonio.

Like many, I went through several emotions over the next 24 hours, including joy for him and the church, sadness at such a great person leaving our diocese, and a bit of uncertainty thinking about the future. Father Gary has been such an integral part of this diocese for decades, and in my time here in Victoria he has been an incredible mentor, leader and friend. What would life be like without him so close by? Without his visits to my office to offer guidance and support? Without his calming presence and astute decision-making?

Then, as a friend of mine and Father Gary’s, I said via text message that day, “All things in life change.”

Yes, this friend, one of Father Gary’s parishioners, who has grown extremely close to him over the years, offered some keen insight via text message that day, “All things in life change. But, thanks be to God, something else in life never changes – God Himself. He is the same yesterday, today and tomorrow (Hebrews 13:8). Great is His faithfulness, and His Mercy endures forever (Psalm 136:1). We are so blessed to have a Creator whose steadfast love is constant.

Lately, I’ve been reading in the Book of Genesis and Exodus. Time and time again, God’s followers – even his chosen leaders – fall short of their covenantal commitments. But God never falls short on His and rescues His people from their failings repeatedly. For example, when Moses is up on Mount Sinai receiving the Ten Commandments from God, the Israelites at the base of the mountain fall into worship of a golden calf, led by none other than Aaron, Moses’ second-in-command. Yet God, in His infinite mercy, rectifies the situation and offers His people another chance. Our God does this for us over and over in our lives and within the lives of our families.

So, perhaps change is a blessing. Through change, we are able to let go of things we hold onto, and re-fix our gaze and hope upon God Himself.

In the course of family life, many changes happen day in and day out. Just the other week, within a period of just a few days I had one son prescribed glasses, and another needing a visit to the emergency room. I’m sure many parents can relate to stories like this. I was talking to one parent the other day who had to visit the emergency room three times in a single weekend. Raising boys sure does provide gray hair, as well as many joys.

But in all of these moments – when life throws curve balls at us – if we can view them through a lens of faith, we will be better for it. God never takes something away to hurt us. He may be teaching us a lesson, but our harm is never His end goal. For He knows well the plans He has for us, plans for our future and hope (Jeremiah 29:11).

This Lent, what change is He inviting you to? We are all called to change during this season, to let go of certain things in order to more firmly hold onto God. While some changes in life seem to “happen” to us, Lent is one of those times where we decide the change. What can you change, in order to grow in faith the remainder of this season?

Let us all embrace change – whether given to or initiated by us – to grow as people of faith. Let us allow change to help us see the everlasting faithfulness and love of Our Creator. And let us pray for Father Gary, as he embraces this exciting change in his own life. May God bless him, and use him for his purposes, as he has already done so in many, many ways around our beautiful Diocese of Victoria.

Baby Joseph arriving in the Year of St. Joseph

Congratulations to Justin and Laura Reyes who are expecting the arrival of their fourth son very, very soon. In fact, by the time the Lighthouse arrives in mailboxes, Joseph may already be here. After they chose the name Joseph, they were excited when Pope Francis declared this year the Year of St. Joseph. The family was surprised with a “curbside shower” on Feb. 24 provided by the Diocese of Victoria chancery staff. “That was really not expected and such a huge blessing for us as we await the arrival of Joseph,” said Justin. “Moving here, having no family in the area, time and time again the diocese has felt like our family. We are so grateful. … My wife (from Columbia) said there is some saying in Columbia that when God gives you a baby under one arm, under the other He will give you the loaf of bread (i.e. things the baby needs).” Joseph will also join brothers Justin, Peter and Giorgio. Bishops write letter opposing Equality Act

WASHINGTON – Five committee chairmen of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops wrote to members of Congress opposing the recent reintroduction of the Equality Act (H.R. 5).

The bishops warned of the threats posed by the proposed legislation to both people of faith and of no faith, with respect to mandates impacting charities and their beneficiaries in need, health care and other conscience rights, taxpayer funding of abortion, freedom of speech, women’s sports and sex-specific facilities, and more. Their letter explained:

“[E]very person is made in the image of God and should be treated accordingly, with respect and compassion. This commitment is reflected in the Church’s charitable service to all people, without regard to race, religion, or any other characteristic. It means we need to honor every person’s right to gainful employment free of unjust discrimination or harassment, and to the basic goods that they need to live and thrive. It also means that people of differing beliefs should be respected.”

The letter is available at https://www.usccb.org/resources/Letter_to_Congress_on_Equality_Act_Feb_23_2021.

Spring cleaning accomplished through Lent

MICHELE ROHDE
Special to the Lighthouse

The first day of spring is March 20, and the annual theme of clearing out the clutter, cleaning and organizing will blow in along with the wind and pollen. Spring is anticipated by those who can’t wait to throw open their windows to let the sun and fresh air inside while spotting the new blooms. It’s also right in the middle of the Lenten season. Springtime tidying up and Lent have a lot in common. They’re all good for the soul – if they’re positively utilized.

A robust UCLA study found that physical clutter is linked to depression. Social scientists, anthropologists and archeologists all concluded that clutter has a profound impact on mood, self-esteem and stress levels.

“Trying to be happy by accumulating possessions is like trying to satisfy hunger by taping sandwiches all over your body.”

– George Carlin, comedian

Here’s why clutter causes those unfavorable effects:

Physical clutter actually takes up mental space and energy and often causes an emotional result, which in turn, can manifest an even greater physical symptom. Clutter causes our senses to work overtime with the wind and pollen. It distracts our attention and resources away from what matters, makes it difficult to relax as our conscious and subconscious minds constantly try to process and solve the problem of the clutter, and signals to us that our work is never complete. Learned emotions associated with clutter could be shame, guilt, embarrassment, frustration and low self-esteem.

Gosh, it’s depressing reading this in and of itself. But do not despair; this bad habit is one of the easiest to clean up out of all the recognized sources of stress (i.e. relationships and careers.) Not only that, it’s the appropriate season for some extra wind in your sails, so let’s pull your anchor up and set our sights on the how.

“First clean the inside of the cup, so that the outside of the cup will be clean, too.”

(Matthew 23:26)

Otherwise known as a “truth bomb” or “mic drop” in today’s culture, that’s some great advice Jesus gave the hypocritical Pharisees back in the day. We need to take a look at ourselves first and ask, “How did we get here?” In more recent times, James Clear, author of “Atomic Habits,” echoes this same sentiment in his excellent book on breaking bad habits and replacing them with the ones you want. One of Clear’s many tips is to separate yourself from your current identity, if unfavorable, and claim the habits of the new identity you desire. After all, “every action you take is a vote for the type of person you want to become.”

To put it simply: If your goal is to complete your first 5K, start to call yourself a runner and then you’d probably need to start eating, sleeping and running like a runner. Don’t decide to run a 5K and continue to call yourself a couch potato. Your brain and body won’t deliver your best results on the path of least resistance if you maintain those kinds of contradictions. If you want to clean up your habits, don’t constantly claim yourself to be an unorganized hot mess, or your brain will keep finding ways to agree and align with that identity. Instead, visualize the environment you desire and the new identity you’d enjoy as the person who maintains that environment. This working backwards from the action to the ideal identity helps with all habits. And notice, it’s working backwards all the way to the identity and not stopping at just the desired outcome. For example, it’s great to identify that you want to lose weight and to know the actions you want to take to lose the weight, but losing weight shouldn’t be your identity. I’m sure you can see how that would be potentially harmful and perpetual. Instead, you might want to visualize yourself as the epitome of ultimate health and happiness and make that the goal that will drive the changes. Little mindset shifts like these can really make all the difference when it comes to reducing burn out and increasing sustainable success.

Now that we have the stuff between our ears a little more lined out, we can get to work on a plan of action. I’m going to lean on the disciplines of Lent -- prayer, fasting and almsgiving.

When it comes to clearing out the clutter of any sort, it helps to start and end the day mindfully. Prayer can help. There are many methods, so explore what suits you and start there. Simply give thanks for what you have, ask for help with what you lack and consider what you have done and need yet to do.

Fasting can be more than giving up chocolate or sodas from now until Good Friday. You can fast from television, social media, gossip or complaining. When you fast from something, it makes you recognize and appreciate its absence for better or worse and can create space where new thoughts, feelings and habits can bloom. The ultimate goal is not to go running back to your vice when Lent ends, but to become transfigured as a result – to become new in Christ, and ultimately changed for the better.

Almsgiving is the act of giving to the needy your money, goods and/or time. What better way to clear out your physical clutter than by keeping this benevolence in mind as you purge? As a result, you may notice some of the mental clutter dissipate as you shift your focus to others’ needs. To ensure you are giving fruitfully, I might add that it’s important to vet non-profit causes first and perform a little research. You can gain the opinion of your priest who may be more familiar with worthy causes and also check the organizations’ web pages to view what percentage of donations is utilized for the cause verses how much goes to their payroll for example. Organizations that spend at least 65 percent of their total expense on program activities are a great start. Give.org is one such website that can help in your vetting.

“He is no fool who gives what he cannot keep to gain what he cannot lose.” – Jim Elliot

All in all, if you desperately want to reduce the chaos and countless messes in your life, I know of no better way than this (next to Marie Kondo on YouTube): Order “Atomic Habits” and jump into a Lenten study or devotional. It’s never too late. You just might, by accident, gain a new best friend who happens to be “the King of cleansing.”

Some people might call Janak, the product of a strong Czech Catholic family, a natural. His mother, Rose Marie Janak, recalls him as a 5-year-old teaching the neighbor children how to make the sign of the cross.

When asked what her reaction was to the announcement about his appointment, Rose Marie said, “I’m still in shock.”

His sister, Sharon Junek, said “I think I always thought he was bishop-worthy.” But the reality of it did take all of them by surprise. “We are very, very thrilled,” she said, “I always envisioned him retiring and teaching at the seminary. So it’s still soaking in.”

His older sister, Cindy Junek, said “Our lives are going to change, but it’s all going to be OK. We’re so excited.”

Cindy said she considered, like many others, how much he does in the Diocese of Victoria and what’s going to happen there. “He said, ‘Cindy, I’m not indispensable.’ He considers everybody a team.”

She said her parents raised all of them with a strong work ethic, and he has always been the type to teach and preach. She said as a child in a building behind the house he would have church and school with their friends.

Rose Marie, who wrote a piece for a vocations newsletter about her son’s vocation as a priest included some of the “signs” from his childhood. The article states, “After we moved to Palacios, it was not long before Gary had converted our back-yard storage building into a combination school house and church. His younger sister quickly learned her numbers and the alphabet in the makeshift school. Mass was also held daily over an altar complete with flowers and a crucifix. Dad’s old ties were used as vestments and Mother’s cookie cutter, which was missing more often than not from the kitchen, was used to cut hosts from flattened slices of bread.”

Father Gary Janak on his day of ordination with Bishop Charles Grahanmann.

Bishop Michael Boulette is shown with Janak during Janak’s ordination as a priest some 33 years ago. Both men will now be auxiliary bishops in the Archdiocese of San Antonio. On April 20, during Janak’s episcopal ordination, Boulette will again have the opportunity to convey a blessing on Janak through the laying of hands. Also shown on this page are Janak’s parents, Joe and Rose Marie, who raised their family in the Czech Catholic tradition and accompanied their son through his journey to priesthood and beyond. The Catholic perspective.

As a child of a different era, Janak’s early life was different from that of many children today. He was raised in a world where technology was not dominant, and he learned the importance of community and family. His parents, Joe and Rose Marie, were active in their community and taught their children the importance of giving back. Janak’s older sister, Sharon, recalled how their mother would often bring home cookies from the kitchen, and Janak would help his siblings to cut out and decorate them.

Janak’s parents were active in the local Catholic church and taught him the importance of faith. They also instilled in him a strong work ethic, which he continues to carry with him today. His mother, Rose Marie, recalled how her son would often help out around the house and in the community.

In his vocation as a priest, Janak has continued to follow his family’s example. He has served in various parishes throughout the Diocese of Victoria and has been instrumental in several building projects in the diocese. His most recent project has been the Cathedral Center, once an old JCPenny building that was gutted and brought back to life for the benefit of the entire diocese.

Beyond brick and mortar, Janak has also been the motivator and creator of programs including Choosing to L.O.V.E., a retreat to strengthen marriage and the Office of Family Evangelization. The bishop recently made a 30-day silent retreat without worry. “The diocese ran fine. It’s a tribute to a good organization.”

Bishop Janak said one of his greatest moments in the Diocese of Victoria was “to see a dream come true in the Emmaus Center” where people can seek counseling from a Catholic perspective.

Bishop Janak’s most challenging time, he said, would be restoring the cathedral after Hurricane Harvey, which took millions of dollars and years to complete. “I’ll always be grateful for what I learned” going through that challenge, he said. “There’s a story in everything – from the roof to the murals inside.”

Still with all the big things that have been built throughout his priesthood, Janak reflected on the small town of Palacios where his inspiration to be a priest took hold. He loves the hard-working people and the mix of cultures and languages and traditions. He said, culturally, San Antonio is a lot like that, too, just much bigger.

Many from Palacios and other rural areas in the Diocese of Victoria, before it was a diocese, were incardinated in the Archdiocese of San Antonio. Janak said, “I’m going to be part of a continuing tradition.”
