Diocese gains two new fathers with Jan. 8 ordination

The Cathedral of Our Lady of Victory was probably as full as it has ever been in the past two years as the two newest priests in the Diocese of Victoria were ordained on Jan. 8.

Father Richard Barfield, officially assigned to Our Lady of the Gulf in Port Lavaca and its missions, and Father Tran Dinh, assigned to St. Mary’s in Victoria, were surrounded by family, friends, and clergy from around the diocese as they professed their vows and offered their lives to the diocese and the Church. Bishop Emeritus David Fellhauer and Archbishop Timothy Broglio of the Archdiocese of the Military Services, also were present for the ordination.

The liturgy of the word was conducted in Vietnamese, Spanish and English, for the various cultures represented at the Mass.

Dear Brothers and Sisters,

On Feb. 14, I will be celebrating the Feast of Sts. Cyril and Methodius with a special Mass in the church in Dubina dedicated to these two great saints. As part of the ceremony that day, I will be declaring that the church is a “diocesan place of pilgrimage.” The following day, I will be traveling with three brother bishops to the Shrine of Our Lady of Guadalupe in Mexico City on a pilgrimage in honor of Mary our Mother.

The Christian experience of pilgrimage goes back to the early days of the Church. Christians would travel together and pray at different holy sites. The whole process of journey, accompaniment and prayer gave spiritual strength and courage in challenging times. The spirituality of the pilgrim journey continues to be a way in which a person can let go of worldly concerns for a moment and re-focus on God, who always walks by our side.

One of the reasons Sts. Cyril and Methodius in Dubina will be a special place of pilgrimage is that several Catholics of Czech descent requested that a Church in Texas be so designated in honor of the ancestors who came to this territory and kept their faith in Jesus Christ and the Catholic Church. Father Wayne Flagg, as the pastor of the parish, accepted the responsibility and offers his spiritual support.

On a practical level, this means that if you and your family or a group travel to the Catholic church in Dubina at any time it is open, and offer a prayer together, you will receive special spiritual graces. It’s a mysterious part of our faith, and I’m as convinced as ever that the spiritual graces that flow from our practices like fasting, making pilgrimages or praying the rosary together have a greater effect on the world than we realize.

There are other ways in which you or your family could make pilgrimages in the diocese of Victoria. You could visit a church on its feast day, like any of the churches dedicated to Sts. Cyril and Methodius on Feb. 14 or one of the churches dedicated to St. Patrick on March 17 or one of the churches dedicated to St. Joseph on March 19.

You also could make pilgrimages to places outside of the diocese, like the Basilica of Our Lady of San Juan in the Valley. Bishop Flores of Brownsville recently told a group that this is the second most visited Shrine in the United States, and it’s only a four-hour drive from Victoria.

The journey to holy places with holy people builds up strength, community and virtue. For me, these pilgrimages also serve to remind me that the goal of the journey is the beautiful pasture that our Shepherd has prepared for his saints in glory.

May you and your families be blessed with the peace of Christ, and may we always remember to pray for eternal peace for our ancestors with great love and respect.

Let’s keep each other in prayer.

In Memoriam

Sister M. Amata Hollas, IWBS, 84, died on Dec. 19, 2021. She was born April 16, 1937, in Lott, Texas, to the late Albert and Ann Gerdes Hollas. She was the eldest from a family of two girls and three boys.

Sister Amata received her grade-school education in Vanderbildt and Edna and graduated from Nazareth Academy in Victoria. She entered Nazareth Convent as a postulant on Dec. 8, 1954, became a novice on Aug. 25, 1955, and was professed on Aug. 27, 1956. She received her BA from Incarnate Word College in San Antonio with a major in English and a minor in Latin and her M.Ed degree from Southwest Texas State University with a major in administration and a minor in psychology.

During her 65 years as a professed Sister, she ministered as a teacher and/or principal at St. Leo School in San Antonio, Our Lady of Victory School in Victoria, Holy Cross School in East Bernard, Sacred Heart School in La Grange, St. Ludmila Academy in Shiner and Nazareth Convent/Academy in Victoria. She also served in the San Antonio Archdiocesan School Office as a school consultant for seven years and as the Congregational Initial Formation Director for 18 years. She served on an diocesan advisory board for The Catholic Lighthouse when it was being established in 1987. She was inspirational in naming the paper.

Over the years she assisted in vocation ministry and served on the Victoria Diocesan Council of Religious. She served on the Leadership Team as councilor for 12 years and as secretary/archivist for the past nine years. Working with archives and being on the board of the Gabriel Project were very dear to her heart.

She was a deeply spiritual woman whose frail drew her close to the Beloved. Her faith was her stronghold as she daily grasped the hand of the Incarnate Word allowing Him to lead her as a Sister of the Incarnate Word and Blessed Sacrament. Eucharist, adoration, Liturgy of the Hours, and contemplation were essential elements in her daily life. Her joyful heart and spirit touched the hearts of all who met her. Family was extremely important to her. She cherished the various family gatherings, letters, emails, and texts and she enjoyed sharing photos of her family.

Sister Amata was preceded in death by her parents and her brother William “Bill” Hollas. She is survived by her sister, Martha Sawyers (Norman), and brothers Dave Hollas (Betty), and Dan Hollas (Kathleen), her sister-in-law, Bunny, six nieces and three nephews and three grandnieces and 11 grandnephews.

Her Mass of Christian burial was held Wednesday, Dec. 29, 2021, at Incarnate Word Convent with Bishop Brendan Cahill as the presider and homilist. Burial followed at Catholic Cemetery No. 3 with the Rev. Albert Yankey presiding.

Pallbearers were Michael Hollas, Brad Hollas, Paul Hollas, Gene Sheblak, Chris Gerdes, and Charles Wileman. Honorary Pallbears were the IWBS Leadership Team and all those for whom she served as Formation Directress. The Sisters and family are grateful to Doctors Frank Parma, Samuel Copeland and Dr. Ty Meyer; and Citizens Medical Center fifth floor staff for the excellent care given Sister Amata.

Memorials may be made to Incarnate Word Convent, Hospice of South Texas, Gabriel Project, or donor’s choice.

Give those you have called to the married state and those you have chosen to live as single persons in the world, the special graces that their lives require. Form us all in the likeness of your Son so that in Him, with Him, and through Him we may love You more deeply and serve You more faithfully, always and everywhere. With Mary we ask this through Christ our Lord. Amen.

“Eternal rest granted unto them, O Lord, and let perpetual light shine upon them. May they rest in peace.”
Salt and light must be used to be effective

EDITOR’S NOTE: The following homily was written for the fifth Sunday in Ordinary Time, Cycle A. Father Kram titled it “Who Are We?”

It is most appropriate that Jesus should compare his followers to salt and light. Salt has always been necessary for life and health, and light has always been necessary for sight.

Any old timer can tell you about how farmers used to butcher hogs in the winter and preserve the meat by soaking it in barrels of brine. The saltier it was, the safer it was.

Also, you know how a low-salt or no-salt diet affects your appetite. Your first reaction is, “How can I eat that?” and then you start looking for substitutes.

Salt is used for preserving and flavoring, and in addition, because it is glistening white, it is regarded as a symbol of purity.

I remember when I was a young man, I was visiting my uncle and aunt, and some of my cousins were also there. One of the girls tried to tell one of the boys a dirty joke, but he wouldn’t let her. She was embarrassed and said, “It can be told,” but he answered, “Anything can be told,” and refused to listen. She was not the kind of girl who would help preserve or keep safe her own virtue or that of others. Besides, she was in bad taste, and was not noted for being a shining example of purity.

Jesus said, “But what if salt goes flat? How can you restore its flavor? Then it is good for nothing but to be thrown out and trampled underfoot.”

These words of Christ may have some reference to the fact that, in Palestine, outdoor stone ovens were built on a bed of salt to keep the heat in better. After a while, the salt lost its insulating ability and was scattered on the ground. So, too, Christ will have to cast off those followers who stop functioning.

To understand Christ’s reference to LIGHT, consider that in Palestine, in Jesus’ day, the houses had only one little round window about a foot and a half in diameter, so they were very dark inside. An oil lamp that looked like a gravy boat with a wick was kept on a lampstand when in use. Since the Jews had no matches or cigarette lighters, they did not extinguish the lamp when they did not need it; they took it down and covered it with a bushel-size earthenware container.

I remember once in the barbershop a man waiting for a haircut was sitting there bragging and cursing and fussing, not noticing that the customer ahead of him getting a haircut was the parish priest. When the barber removed the cloth, the man was very embarrassed and said, “Gosh, Father, if I had known it was you, I would never have talked that way.” The priest replied, “If you don’t care if God hears you, why worry about me?” The man’s Christianity was certainly well concealed.

A Christian who wishes to be a light of the world finds happiness in following Christ and finds ways to dispel depression and gloom and to spread joy. Someone has suggested that the Christian should celebrate frequently. It does seem likely that one who is always looking for something to rejoice over will find many such opportunities. If you tell him, “Good morning,” he will never say, “What’s good about it?” I once told an elderly patient that nothing exciting had happened that day. He pointed out the birds and the trees and the flowers.

Christian light also guides and attracts. Often, when individuals must take a stand, there are usually a good number of persons of good will who will follow if someone will just lead. A good Christian who says, “I’m sorry, but the thing we’re being asked to do is wrong and I’m having no part of it,” will often find himself surrounded by supporters who were waiting for someone to bring it up.

So let us call today “Salt and Light Day” – a fine day to rededicate ourselves to preserving and flavoring and lighting up with world.

Lord Jesus, thank you for making your teachings so clear. Help us to stir up ever finer efforts to make Christianity an ever more effective force for the happiness of mankind. Grant that by your grace, our efforts may bring much praise to our Heavenly Father. Amen.
Hundreds walk to support life

VICTORIA — As the crowd gathered in DeLeon Plaza before the Annual Candlelight March for Life on Jan. 27, many listened to praise and worship music while others discussed the possibility of ending Roe v. Wade and the progress being made to restrict abortions.

During the walk the participants recited the rosary and carried signs and candles to show their love for the lives of the unborn.

Film producer and human rights activist Jason Jones was the guest speaker and addressed the crowd who gathered at Our Lady of Sorrows at the end of the walk.

Jones told the group how abortion had affected him personally. At 17, his girlfriend discovered she was pregnant. He said he wanted more than anything to be a father and raise a child in a loving home, so he quit school and joined the military, while his girlfriend planned to hide the pregnancy until he returned from basic training. Not long before he was due to graduate from boot camp, she called, crying so long and hard that he said the only way he could describe it was, “Her soul was crying.” Her father had discovered the pregnancy and took her to have an abortion.

He said he did not know that abortion was legal and wanted someone to call the police because her father had killed his baby. From that point on, he made it a personal mission to let people know how he felt and to make abortion illegal.

He also talked about his conversion from atheist to believer to Catholic that occurred in the midst of his work to help the vulnerable.

“Our creator wills for us the culture of life,” he told those gathered. And he thanked each of them for leading the way to the preservation of life.

Consecrated life beautifully explained in simplest terms

When thinking about what to write about in this month’s article, I immediately thought about writing about consecrated life since World Day of Prayer for Consecrated Life is Feb. 2. The first thing I thought was I would try to explain the difference between “consecrated life” and “holy orders” with my 6-year-old nephew in mind, because Albert Einstein supposedly said that if we can’t explain something to a 6-year-old child, we really don’t understand it ourselves.

So I asked some Sisters how they would describe the difference between the two and these huge words and theological teachings were being thrown at me that my nephew would not understand and I don’t have 12 pages in this newspaper to try to explain it in a way where he could understand.

So then I decided, maybe I would just write about what consecrated life meant to people.

I went to some friends and asked them to define consecrated life, but to do it as if they were talking to a 6-year-old. My friend Melissa Perales said that it was people who dedicated their lives to follow Jesus. I texted Aldo Camacho, who replied, “Consecrated life are those men and women that feel a strong desire for closeness and friendship with Jesus, so they leave everything including the possibility of marriage, to follow Jesus for life.” That’s quite beautiful, I have smart friends.

Ricardo Salinas compared life to the Super Mario Bros. game. How we are all like little Mario and it’s OK to be Little Mario. Consecrated life is finding the mushroom and becoming “Big Mario” to devote our lives to Jesus and be closer to Him. I think he understood the assignment because what child doesn’t know the Super Mario Bros? I Facebook messaged Joseph Friar who, after joking said that it meant I was married to Jesus, said it’s “someone who loves God so much they spend every day as His special helper.” I think this will be the answer that I would use in the future whenever I have to explain consecrated life to a 6-year-old.

Different people with different answers, yet they were kind of the same. They saw that people who live the consecrated life choose to devote their lives to Jesus. Then I thought to myself, why am I not asking this same question to the treasure of ladies that I have living with me? So I approached a few of my Sisters and asked them a slightly different question. I asked them, what consecrated life meant to them?

Sister Stephanie Martinez, who serves as the Vicar for Religious in the Diocese of Victoria said, “Consecrated life is my life’s boat! My God is with me in my boat of life steering me as my captain through life’s waters to the eternal shore as I joyfully and completely consecrate myself freely in vowed life offering my gifts of evangelical poverty (living simply), consecrated chastity (God is my all-consuming Love), and religious obedience (following God’s will). I am privileged to live in a community with other Sisters who have chosen this life and who share the same desires and dreams. Together we joyfully love and serve God and all God’s people – our brothers and sisters in Jesus, our Incarnate Word.”

Sister Stephanie Marie, I had another sister tell me that, similar to how a chalice is consecrated and then set aside to be only used at Mass, our life as a consecrated person is set aside to be used for the mission of God.

I then asked myself the same question since, later this year, I hope to make my final profession and live the consecrated life until I go to my eternal home. So what does this life mean to me?

To me, it means giving Him my everything, loving the One that loved me first with all my being. To be in a relationship with my God who looks past my weaknesses and my flaws and sees me. I wish to be consecrated so that, hopefully, one day my life will show the love I have for my Lord, and that when people see that love shining through me, they will actually see that it is His love reflecting through me to them.

I pray to be consecrated as a Sister of the Incarnate Word and Blessed Sacrament so that every day for the rest of my life I may walk hand in hand with the love of my life and my best friend, Jesus Christ.

Dear Friends of Catholic Education,

May God Bless You!

Over the past nearly two years, our school communities have been challenged like never before. Thanks to our devoted educators and administrators, we were able to return to in-person learning in August of 2020 and have remained open through the unpredictability of the COVID-19 pandemic. In our most uncertain of times, the faith and resiliency of our school communities has shown through. We stay committed to instilling the faith in our children while providing them a high-quality education, rich in rigorous academics and premiere programs.

Providing a Catholic education takes sacrifice, and we are grateful for our parents, grandparents, and guardians who make it a reality for over 2,700 children in our region each year. We are also thankful for the generosity of benefactors and donors who support and believe in the mission of our schools.

We look forward to continued success over the coming years and know that—with God’s help—we will be able to continue our work of bringing the Gospel message of our Lord to children throughout this diocese.

May God bless you. Let us keep each other in prayer,

+ The Most Reverend Brendan J. Cahill, S.T.D.

The deacon’s ministry in the Church often misunderstood

At Your Service

By Deacon Michael Tankersley

"Then they said to him [John the Baptist], “Who are you, so that we may give an answer to those who sent us? What do you say about yourself?” John 1:22"

As I was removing my stole and dalmatic after attending the recent ordination of Father Richard Barfield and Father Tran Dinh, from across the street a man greeted me with the words, “Good morning Father.” I smiled and returned the greeting adding, “But I am not a priest. I’m a deacon.” The man paused before replying, “Oh well, maybe you’ll make it next year.”

Even 50-plus years after the renewal, the permanent diaconate still confuses some people, including deacons ourselves:

“We need more deacons because there is a shortage of priests.” Deacons are not ordained to the priesthood and do not serve as substitute priests. We need more deacons, because we need more deacons.

“It must be challenging to decide when you should be a deacon and when you should be a husband, or a father, or employee.” An ordained deacon is never NOT a deacon, just as I do not become “unmarried” when I am proclaiming the Gospel at Mass.

“I’m not a priest, I’m only a deacon.” The diaconate ministry is not simply about taking on a mission, but of accepting God’s invitation to enter into the Mystery of Christ the Servant. “Only” is not a fitting word for the evangelical authority of our ministry we receive by becoming configured to Christ and allowing Him to live out His suffering service through us.

Some of the confusion stems from the unfortunate tendency to describe the deacon in terms of the functions we exercise; that is, in what we can do (bless marriages, minister solemn baptisms, proclaim the gospel, as examples) and what we cannot do (celebrate Mass, hear confessions, anoint the sick, as examples).

It is true that there are faculties a deacon receives upon ordination, but when function is the only color used to paint the portrait of a deacon, the result is a bland and one-dimensional outline of what is truly rich, brilliant and full. This functional approach results in two specific distortions of the deacon and the diaconate. Firstly, while most often our service is outside the sanctuary, hidden from the public at-large, we are most often seen in the context of sacramental/liturgical activities -- at Holy Eucharist, at baptisms, at benediction, and the like. Given that the Holy Eucharist is no more valid when the deacon is involved and no less valid when he isn’t, and since the sacramental and/or liturgical activities which the deacon can administer can also be done by others, it leads to questioning the necessity of the diaconate. When seen only in the context of “helping out” at Mass, it is understandable that deacons would often be referred to as “assistant priests” or, to use the expression of theologian Richard Gaillardetz, “priests, junior grade.”

Secondly, this utilitarian and functional approach obscures the reality of why and to what the deacon is ordained. “The sacrament of Holy Orders marks them [deacons] with an imprint (“character”), which cannot be removed and which configures them to Christ, who made himself the “deacon,” or servant, of all.” (CCC 1570)

Simply put, we were not ordained “to do” but “to be.” Our formation was not a certification of proficiency to perform certain tasks but rather a transformation into a new person with a new character.

Through ordination, the deacon is configured to Christ who “came not to be served, but to serve” and by which the Church’s service is sacramentalized. When the deacon serves the People of God in the ministries of the liturgy, the word and charity, he does so as “… a sacrament of the Lord Jesus himself …” (Pope Paul VI, Ad Pascendum) and as “living signs of the servanthood of Christ’s church.” (John Paul II, 1987 address to the U.S. diaconate).

I do not offer the preceding in order to garner applause for deacons personally or collectively nor as a call for the elevation of the status of the diaconate. To do so would be to move from the role of servant to being served. I offer these thoughts because it is necessary to recognize both the salvific priesthood and the servanthood degrees of the Church if one is to appreciate the fullness of Christ’s Church. In the 2nd century, St. Ignatius of Antioch in his Epistle to the Trallians:

“Let everyone revere the deacons as Jesus Christ, the bishop as the image of the Father, and the presbyters [priests] as the senate of God and the assembly of the apostles. For without them [emphasis mine] one cannot speak of the Church.” (CCC 1554)

Pax tibi (Peace be with you).

Holy Cross welcomes new principal

BAY CITY – Holy Cross Catholic School welcomed Linda Bradford as its new principal recently. The job position had been open since the end of the 2020-21 school year.

Bradford comes with 22 years of public school experience as teacher, counselor, assistant principal and principal. After retiring from public schools, she spent seven and a half years at Holy Rosary Catholic School in Rosenberg.

She was attracted to the position in Bay City after moving from Sealy to Wharton, she said.

She chose to stay in the Catholic school setting for many reasons. “When I was in public school, I had 862 kids and 25 and 30 discipline referrals a day. That just wears you out,” she said. “I love the way that Christ is the center of our focus here. We can be in our Catholic environment.”

To be able to teach values is important to her and the smaller community has its benefits, too. “I just like the relationships that I can form here, not only with the students and parents and staff, but the community and stakeholders,” Bradford said.

This article is the first installment in what will be a monthly column, “At Your Service,” which will come from the perspective of the permanent deacon. It will flow from a reference made in the Didascalia Apostolorum (Teaching of the Apostles), a third century account of the practices of the Church: “Yet let the deacon be the hearing of the bishop, and his mouth and his heart and his soul; for when you are both of one mind, through your agreement, there will be peace also in the Church.” What is the deacon hearing and seeing in his role as the “eyes and ears” of the Bishop? What does he say to those who have not heard the Good News? What are the silent cries of those muted by grief and anguish and despair whom he is called to listen to? What do the faces of those on the peripheries look like? This column is intended to describe the lived experiences of the deacon in and from the sanctuary. While I will serve as host of the column, it will not be spoken by a singular voice. You will read bios, reflections, news and experiences from the choir of deacons who serve in our diocese. Experiences from those who serve, about those whom they serve.

Until next month, please keep in men and wives who will be attending their diaconate formation retreat Feb. 4-6. Additionally, pray for the permanent deacons of our diocese and their wives who will be attending their annual Permanent Deacon’s Retreat Feb. 25-27.

Embrace the sacrifice for love’s sake

BY MICHELE ROHDE
Special to the Lighthouse

I love February. You have Valentine’s Day, Super Bowl commercials, Ice Cream for Breakfast Day (Feb. 6), Don’t Cry Over Spilled Milk Day (Feb. 11) and my birthday! February is also the month in which those with New Year’s Resolutions realize that their goals have blown away with the last cold front, so they either give up or dig in.

It’s do or die time, people.

At a conference I recently attended, the speaker, Dr. Scott Hahn, reminded us that true and real love cannot exist without sacrifice. Then he went on to say that true and real sacrifice cannot exist without suffering. I get it. I mean, I’m a parent, wife, daughter (of a King), and employer. Tons of love, suffering and sacrifice tangled up into those roles.

“Suffering without love is unendurable. But love without suffering is impossible.” – Scott Hahn.

That was the point when I wrote down “Darn the luck.” I was being facetious, yes, but don’t we all naturally wish for instant gratification. So most of us could receive the gain with no pain? As facetious, yes, but don’t we all naturally wish in my notes, “Darn the luck.” I was being knowledgeable of love, suffering and sacrifice tangled up into those roles.

Bad days will happen. Let them. Don’t give over and over again, every single morning. Day by day it WILL change. It doesn’t allow you to be disconnected from the present – instead, it demands you to be wide awake, feet planted firmly on the ground, well-aware of your situation, surroundings and of others. That kind of presence, in and of itself, is a sacrifice. It could also potentially feel like suffering for some who are seriously addicted to their distractions. When we are either forced or choose to think about others, we are giving up our own selfish tendencies to focus on someone or something else. When you do that, expecting nothing in return but love, that’s also a sacrifice that sometimes leads to more suffering. Maybe you’ve experienced this in a few ways in your life … on the receiving end, the giving end or both? Children are excellent instruments for yanking us into the present moment often needing their caregivers to sacrifice their own wants and needs in order to provide right on the spot for those little people. So are life’s emergencies. Whether we choose it or not, love is worth suffering for.

Someday reach that finish line. They will constantly sacrifice and suffer. Constantly learn and grow. That kind of love doesn’t allow you to be disconnected from the present – instead, it demands you to be wide awake, feet planted firmly on the ground, well-aware of your situation, surroundings and of others. That kind of presence, if and of itself, is a sacrifice. It could also potentially feel like suffering for some who are seriously addicted to their distractions. When we are either forced or choose to think about others, we are giving up our own selfish tendencies to focus on someone or something else. When you do that, expecting nothing in return but love, that’s also a sacrifice that sometimes leads to more suffering. Maybe you’ve experienced this in a few ways in your life … on the receiving end, the giving end or both? Children are excellent instruments for yanking us into the present moment often needing their caregivers to sacrifice their own wants and needs in order to provide right on the spot for those little people. So are life’s emergencies. Whether we choose it or not, love is worth suffering for.

With that thought in mind, if you’ll use it to reframe your goals in a new light, I think it’ll help us to tilt the scales on the sad statistic that by February over 90 percent of those with resolutions give up. You may have financial, relationship, fitness, career or other personal goals on your mind right now. If you can at those goals as something worth sacrificing -- maybe even suffering -- for, the road to obtaining that goal this year might be the single best thing you travel on in 2022. To say it another way, not all good things will require a fight, but good things are worth fighting for. So, envision what it will feel like to live your best life, step into and settle into those feelings right now and bring that feeling to your current circumstances and relationships. Day by day it WILL change your reality.

I challenge you to use this still new year as a worthy excuse to re-launch your rocket, over and over again, every single morning. Bad days will happen. Let them. Don’t give up on goodness just because it didn’t come one morning. Chase it. Claim it. Embody it. Invite Jesus to walk with you in it. Set your vision(s) and appreciate the ride getting there.

The bright side is, when we have had to endure long and hard, we can truly appreciate good instant gratification for what it is when we do receive it. For instance, allowing others to lift us up on the bad days or simply relishing a slice of heaven from the Cheesecake Factory. We can more fully appreciate the bounty, without as much guilt or emptiness at the end, if we can more clearly recognize the sacrifice made by others for our benefit. Those happy little moments will happen along the way. If we can, first, notice them, then we can feel gratitude for the grace, because that’s what it is. Something too good to be true, that we don’t necessarily deserve. I’ll take two please!

Los viajes peregrinos construyen fuerza, comunidad, virtud

Queridos hermanos y hermanas,

El 14 de febrero celebraré la Fiesta de los Santos. Cirilo y Metodio con una mesa especial en la iglesia de Dubina dedicada a estos dos grandes santos. Como parte de la ceremonia de ese día, estaré declarando que esta iglesia es un “lugar diocesano de peregrinación”. Al día siguiente viajaré con tres hermanos obispos al Santuario de Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe en la Ciudad de México en una peregrinación en honor a María nuestra Madre.

La experiencia cristiana de la peregrinación se remonta a los primeros días de la Iglesia. Los cristianos viajarían juntos y orarían en diferentes lugares sagrados. Todo el proceso de camino, acompañamiento y oración dio fuerza espiritual y coraje en tiempos difíciles. La espiritualidad del peregrinaje sigue siendo un camino en el que una persona puede dejar por un momento las preocupaciones mundanas y volver a centrarse en Dios, que siempre camina a nuestro lado.

Una de las razones por las que Sts. Cirilo y Metodio en Dubina serán un lugar especial de peregrinación es que varios católicos de ascendencia checa solicitaron que se designe una Iglesia en Texas en honor a los antepasados que llegaron a este territorio y mantuvieron su fe en Jesucristo y la Iglesia Católica. El padre Wayne Flagg, como párroco de la parroquia, aceptó la responsabilidad y ofrece su apoyo espiritual.

En un nivel práctico, esto significa que si usted y su familia o un grupo viajan a la iglesia católica en Dubina en cualquier momento que esté abierta y ofrecen una oración juntos, recibirán gracias espirituales especiales. Es una parte misteriosa de nuestra fe, y estoy tan convencido como siempre de que las gracias espirituales que fluyen de nuestras prácticas como el ayuno, las peregrinaciones o el rezo del rosario juntos tienen un mayor efecto en el mundo de lo que creemos.

Hay otras formas en las que usted o su familia pueden peregrinar en la diócesis de Victoria. Podría visitar una iglesia en su día de fiesta, como cualquiera de las iglesias dedicadas a los Santos. Cirilo y Metodio el 14 de febrero o una de las iglesias dedicadas a San Patricio el 17 de marzo o una de las iglesias dedicadas a San José el 19 de marzo.

El viaje a los lugares santos con personas santas construye fuerza, comunidad y virtud. Para mí, estas peregrinaciones sirven también para recordarme que la meta del camino es el hermoso pasado que nuestro Pastor ha preparado para sus Santos en la Gloria. Que ustedes y sus familias sean bendecidos con la paz de Cristo, y que siempre recordemos orar por la paz eterna para nuestros antepasados con gran amor y respeto.

Mantengámonos unos a otros en oración.

Aplicación Hallow Español ofrece oraciones católicas, meditaciones en español

CHICAGO (CNS) — Hallow, la aplicación católica de oración y meditación número 1 en el mundo, ha lanzado su versión en español, Hallow Español, con una amplia gama de contenido exclusivamente para católicos hispanos.

La aplicación — disponible en todos los países de habla hispana y en Estados Unidos — “tiene como objetivo ayudar a católicos hispanos a profundizar su fe”, dijo un comunicado de prensa. “A medida que aumenta el porcentaje de católicos en Estados Unidos que son hispanos — con un tercio (33 por ciento) de todos los adultos católicos de EE. UU. identificándose como hispanos — la Iglesia Católica se ha enfocado más en brindar recursos y programas que atraigan a sus feligreses de habla hispana”, señalaba el comunicado.

“La tecnología ha desempeñado un papel importante para llegar a los católicos hispanos”, agregó el comunicado. “Pero no ha habido una aplicación católica que los atienda, hasta ahora”.

“Con más de 1.7 millones de descargas, Hallow se ha convertido en un recurso esencial para la oración y la meditación en el mundo de habla inglesa”, expresó en un comunicado Jaime Gil, líder del equipo de contenido en español de Hallow. “A medida que avanzamos con nuestra visión de tener millones de personas orando todos los días, estamos emocionados de hacer que el mismo contenido de calidad esté disponible en español”.

Se puede descargar una versión de prueba de 14 días de Hallow Español; información para registrarse en la versión de prueba se puede encontrar en www.hallow.com.

Aquellas personas que ya tienen la edición en inglés de la app pueden cambiar el idioma a español y así aparecerán todas las oraciones y meditaciones en español.

“El español no solo se habla en 21 países de las Américas, España, y otras partes del mundo”, indicó Gil, “sino que también es el segundo idioma más hablado en Estados Unidos. Con Hallow Español, creemos que Dios continuará santificando la vida de muchas personas más en todo el mundo”.

El contenido original de Hallow Español está diseñado específicamente para una audiencia hispana y se actualizará continuamente durante el año litúrgico. Para su lanzamiento oficial en diciembre, ese contenido incluyó la Novena de Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe, un Desafío Comunitario de Las Posadas, y meditaciones especiales para el Día de los Reyes Magos (la fiesta de la Epifanía).

Hallow, que ha acumulado más de 40,000 reseñas de cinco estrellas, está disponible en Apple App Store, Google Play Store, y Amazon App Store.

Durante el año pasado, Hallow agregó muchos líderes religiosos a la aplicación, incluyendo el obispo auxiliar de Los Ángeles, Robert E. Barron, fundador del ministerio de medios Word on Fire; el padre Mike Schmitz, sacerdote de la Diócesis de Duluth, Minnesota, y co-creador del podcast diario “La Biblia en un año”; Scott Hahn, fundador y presidente del Centro St. Paul de Teología Bíblica en Steubenville, Ohio; Leah Darrow, esposa y madre católica, autora y presentadora de podcasts; y la Hermana Miriam James Heidland, miembro de la Sociedad de Nuestra Señora de la Santísima Trinidad, quien es una oradora solicitada en conferencias de jóvenes.
Dare to be different in a time of ‘apostolic mission’

By Justin Reyes

I’m in the middle of a book entitled “From Christendom to Apostolic Mission,” and it’s a fantastic read. I highly recommend it. It’s about understanding the current culture in which the Church finds herself, and how to respond in order to continue spreading the Gospel. The book forces readers to come to grips with the reality that, for the most part, we are not living in a time of Christendom. In a time of Christendom, the values and norms of society are moving us closer to Jesus. I think we can agree that the overall values in society nowadays are not doing that.

So what do we do? How do we respond? The book suggests that there are actually advantages to living in a time of “Apostolic Mission” when the church’s values are counter-cultural to those of the world.

One thing we need to embrace is being different from the world. Our witness of our Christian faith and how we live it day-to-day should be so shocking to people that they want to know more. As Pope Francis has emphasized, we should be joyful witnesses to the Gospel. He himself has even been quoted as saying, “Christendom no longer exists.” His suggested response is not to be bitter about this, but to be a hopeful, joyful disciple on fire with God’s love. In other words, in times of apostolic mission, like today, you want to be more Catholic, not less. You don’t want to water down the faith, but present it fully, primarily in the way you live.

Another thing we must do is stay close to Jesus, frequenting prayer and the sacraments. Through them, Christ gives us the graces to live differently and the wisdom for how to navigate today’s culture. If we think we can live Godly without Jesus by our side, we are mistaken. He is our anchor for stability, and our guiding light for how to move forward.

A third thing that’s essential is to find fellowship with other believers. We can do this through a men’s group, women’s group, or becoming more active in our parishes. We need to be around others pursuing holiness. It’s been said that “saints come in clusters” and many of these even during a time of Christendom. For even in those times when it’s been easier to live the Christian life, we have still needed brightly shining examples such as St. Francis of Assisi, and they often had friends with them for the journey, such as St. Clare or the band of brothers that joined his newly established order.

Two upcoming events that will help you to live differently and boldly this day-in-age and find fellowship are the annual men’s and women’s conferences. The men’s is on March 5, and will focus on the role of a Catholic man. The women’s is April 23 and will focus on the Blessed Virgin Mary. More information is available at www.victoriadiocese.org/men and www.victoriadiocese.org/women.

I pray that this year we will all live more boldly for Jesus. We are in the midst of a world that really needs Him. He is the answer to every problem, struggle, or burden. And He promises us that “in the world you will have trouble, but, take courage, I have conquered the world.” (John 16:33 NABRE).

Angels remembered
EL CAMPO — St. Robert Bellarmine Catholic Daughters of the Americas sponsored their third annual Angel Christmas Tree to support the Matagorda/Wharton Crisis Center for children of families affected by domestic abuse. The response from the parishioners and the community was overwhelming, according to Terri Beltran, CDA member. “We sponsored 17 families ranging from a newborn to 15 years of age. We would like to say, ‘Thank you,’ to all the sponsors and the anonymous donors for choosing an ‘angel’ from the Angel Tree,” she said. The gifts were blessed by the Rev. Philip Brune, pastor of St. Robert, and presented to Beverly Escobar, Crisis Center Outreach Manager, Samantha Counts, Outreach Advocate, Ashley Danna, Forensic/Interviewer and Community Education Specialist at the “Posadas,” a tradition of reenacting the nine-day pilgrimage of Mary and Joseph’s journey to Bethlehem and their search for a place of shelter. GIFTS OF GOD BLESSED FOR FARMERS TO FEED THE WORLD

JANET JONES
The Catholic Lighthouse

GANADO, Texas — On a windy, cold Jan. 15 morning, Bishop Brendan Cahill blessed the samples of seed and soil for the rural Diocese of Victoria.

The blessing took place during a special Mass on the residential property of Bart and Karen Hajovsky, owners of BH Genetics, a truly home-grown seed corn and grain sorghum business that now distributes from coast to coast.

“Of course a privilege to have him (Bishop Cahill) come and do this for the rural area, because everybody seems to forget about the rural area,” Mrs. Hajovsky said. “It’s very special.”

During his homily, the bishop, referred to the first reading at the Mass from the First Book of Samuel, which recounts the anointing of Saul who was simply on a mission to track down his father’s lost donkeys.

“You all know what it’s like to track down a lost animal,” he said. “And then, what we hear in the story, is that God was working through all that. That he (Saul) was chosen and anointed to be the king of Israel. One on level, it reminds us that God works in mysterious ways.”

What is shown, Bishop Cahill said, is that “God will sustain us each day and guide our lives. What a beautiful thought as we bless seed, because it is a hopeful sign. The seed is planted and the soil prepared. Ultimately, we know that God is in control and provides the bounty.”

Bishop Cahill, president of the Catholic Rural Life organization, blesses seed and soil samples for farmers in the Diocese of Victoria on Jan. 15 in Ganado. Priests celebrating with him were the Rev. Stephen Vacek, director of the diocese’s CRL chapter, the Rev. Greg Korenek, pastor of Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Ganado, and the Rev. Michael Rother, pastor of St. Philip the Apostle in El Campo. (Janet Jones/The Catholic Lighthouse)

The homily, said, “Whenever we come into a church like this, we cannot help but say, ‘God is good.’ God has blessed us as a people, no matter what we think of the world.”

He continued by saying that the men would learn as priests, as he continues to learn as a bishop, that it might often seem like the worst of times. (The last two years have been difficult because of the COVID-19 pandemic and extremely polarizing political issues.) However, he added, “Every age that we live in is a gift God has given us. God has given you this time to proclaim the good news and to give your life as a sacrifice.”

The current Eucharistic Revival is “a beautiful time to be a priest,” Bishop Cahill said, as the new priests will join their brother priests in proclaiming the consecrated bread and wine as the true body and blood of Jesus.

Both of the men ordained came to the priesthood on paths different from most seminarians. First of all, both have been devout family men, both married, and both with grown children and grandchildren. Father Richard is the only married priest in the diocese, and one of only about 120 out of 46,000 in the U.S. since the Church allowed clergy from some protestant denominations who already were married, to become Catholic priests. He had previously served as a chaplain in the military as an ordained minister for the Church of the Nazarene.

Father Dinh, a widower, discerned the priesthood as a young man, but devoted himself to family. After raising his children, he again felt called and was encouraged to seek the priesthood by friends as well as his children.

Addressing the men before the ordination, Bishop Cahill said, “Deacon Richard and Deacon Tran, you are open to the Word of God in your life. You strive for personal holiness and sanctification. When God spoke, you were able to listen… What may have seemed impossible at the beginning became possible, because God opened the doors.”

Echoing the words of the young bishop who would become St. John Paul II, Bishop Cahill said the most important thing to say about the priesthood is that, “The priest needs to be, No. 1, a preacher of divine mercy; that we live in a world where people need to know God’s healing and merciful compassion.”

In another part of the homily where he spoke to the men to be ordained, he said, “Today, for the first time, you are going to pronounce the words that were pronounced in the gospels. Words that every priest will acknowledge we are not worthy to proclaim. Yet God has given us an eternal spirit and has chosen to work through us. And in transforming bread and wine into the body and blood, you offer it up as the sacrifice of Jesus Christ and you join yourself to that sacrifice. You become Christ for the world.”
