

If you've noticed that diced tomatoes and refried beans haven't been on the wish list in a while it's because of one generous donor. The Watts Mill merchant (not a grocer) who donated 240 cans of tomatoes a few months ago did so again and this time he included 144 cans of refries. Your pantry can't thank him enough. Nor can we thank you enough. The list of acknowledgements that appears at the end of every one of these irregular updates just doesn't adequately represent the impact you have on your pantry. But it's all we've got, so thank you.

Harvesters has recently offered two new mystery boxes that aren't all that mysterious once they're opened. In fact, their contents have proven consistent from one acquisition to the next. While "Condiments" and "Protein" continue to surprise and sometimes frustrate, these new boxes of dairy and meat have been reliable sources of yogurt, butter, sour cream, shredded cheddar, breakfast sausages, meat balls, and chicken taco filling. They are, needless to say, very popular and may be gone soon. We get 'em while we can.

What did the infrequently available "Condiments" and frequently available "Protein" deliver this time? Lots of salad dressing, barbecue sauce, mustard, various canned beans, peanut butter and, as always, a few cans of tomato soup. Each item will grace either our shopping list shelves or the free basket of odds and ends that always appeal to someone's palate.

Thank you for the breakfast cereal, the sugar, the soups, the pasta, the mac 'n cheese, and the canned fruits and vegetables. Thank you for the razors, deodorant, shampoo, toothbrushes, and bar soap. All of those things are part of our basic inventory and in high demand. Thank you.

July was a big month. A lot of demand was put on your pantry and thanks to you and to our volunteers (bless them) we came through once again for those in need.
