Section II (to be completed by student and parents together)

A Hybrid Model

A high school hybrid program requires students to be independent learners while parents provide supervision and encouragement, as well as helping the young men learn to manage their schedule. It is distinct from homeschooling with its in-person instruction and tutoring, opportunities for group discussion, and accountability to outside teachers. In order to protect an environment that supports academic success and growth in virtue, there are expectations of both students and their families. Please review the following statements to help determine if a hybrid model will work for your son and family.

Parent & Student Expectations

Review, discuss, and initial the following expectations of both students and parents.

-Parents encourage students by setting goals, checking work, and communicating with the teachers. Parents are available to supervise, encourage, and assist students at home on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Certain classes may require parents to check daily work and report grades to teachers.
