Too many church-goers have become disengaged

SAN ANGELO – One of the keys to the very future of the church is re-engaging people with their parish community, Washington-based theologian and speaker Robert McCarty told a crowd of over 250 at the annual Diocesan Conference Day, Feb. 7 in San Angelo.

The church, McCarty said, has, for many reasons, fallen victim to the practices and attitudes of post-modern era Christians, a type of church-goer that often has a “me first” mentality when it comes to worship.

Too many people, McCarty said, see God as either a cosmic therapist, a divine butler, or both.

McCarty cited a 2008 Pew Study on the U.S. Religious Landscape which noted congregational membership is shrinking, leading to more people who become believers -- but not belongers -- which leads to a religion-less spirituality that is both privatized and individualistic.

“The difference is engagement in the church,” McCarty said. “Engagement is a strong

‘Life at Conception Act’ would declare unborn children as persons

By Bishop Michael Pfeifer, OMI

Thirty-six years ago, in 1973, sadly the U.S. Supreme Court’s Roe v. Wade ruling forced abortion-on-demand on the people of the United States of America. Since that fateful decision, the Supreme Court condemned to painful deaths without trial 45 million babies for the crime of being “inconvenient.” Now is the time for all pro-lifers to become much more pro-active and work to bring an end to abortion using the Constitution itself instead of amending it.

Working from what the Supreme Court ruled in Roe v. Wade, pro-lifers must actively promote and pass a “Life at Conception Act” that declares all unborn children as persons as defined by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution, stating that they are entitled to legal protection. In its deadly decision in 1973, the Supreme Court admitted in Roe v. Wade what would cause the case for legal abortion to collapse. When the Supreme Court handed down its now-infamous Roe v. Wade decision, it did so based on a new, previously undefined “right of privacy” which is discovered in so-called “emanations” of “penumbras” of the Constitution. Based on constitutional law, this decision was a disaster. But never once did the Supreme Court declare abortion itself to be a constitutional right.

Instead the Supreme Court said: “We need not resolve the difficult question of when life begins… the judiciary at this point in the development...”

Letter from the Bishop: ‘Believe in the Power of the Spirit of Love’

Collection for the Church in Central, Eastern Europe

My dear Sisters and Brothers:

In Central and Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union, Catholics are often in the minority. They sometimes have few resources to sustain their charitable works, run parishes, and educate people for ministry. For years, in many of these countries, Christianity was practiced in the shadows for fear of persecution. Yet in spite of these obstacles, a strong foundation for a revitalized Church has been set, and Catholics continue to grow in faith and in numbers.

The theme for the 2009 Collection for the Church in Central and Eastern Europe, “Believe in the Power of the Spirit of Love,” speaks of the rich past, encouraging the present, and promising future of the Church of this region. God’s perfect love has sustained and strengthened the people and the Church, creating a new generation of believers while energizing those who clung to their faith through the darkest of times.

Your gifts to this collection, which will be held Ash Wednesday, February 25, will help build churches; train and educate pastors and laypeople; publish Catholic newspapers; sustain orphanages; evangelize children, adults and seniors; and provide scholarships to Catholic students.

First year of Big Spring consolidation passes

By Msgr. Bernard L Gully

On February 1, Bishop Michael Pfeifer, came to Holy Trinity Parish in Big Spring to celebrate one year since the consolidation of the three parishes of Sacred Heart, Immaculate Heart of Mary and St. Thomas and the mission of St. Joseph, Coahoma, into one new parish – Holy Trinity.

The vision of one parish for all the 1,000 families among the 34,000 inhabitants of Howard County was conceived many years ago and gradually developed over time. As early as 1990 this vision was part of a 20-year Plan for Staffing Parishes in the Diocese of San Angelo. Faced with the prospect of providing ministry with few pastors, a plan for clustering and consolidating parishes was developed. In Big Spring the plan urged sharing staff, programs, councils, facilities, and finally worship space.

For Howard County the vision was that one pastor with a parochial vicar (associate pastor) would be assigned as a way of unifying all the congregations. By combining all the existing resources of property and buildings, but especially the many gifts and talents of the people of God, the Catholic Church could more effectively bear witness to the love and unity of Christ and be of service to the various needs of all, not only Catholics, but all the people of God.

Pastoral councils and finance councils together with their respective pastors formed an area council to discuss ways to bring this about. The goal was to make this effective February 15, 2008. I was named pastor and Fr. Ariel Lagunilla was assigned associate pastor.

Bishop Pfeifer: The president is using your tax dollars to kill babies

By Bishop Michael Pfeifer, OMI

In his inaugural address, President Obama spoke about care and protection for the weak and defenseless, but on his third full day in office, Obama unleashed an attack on the weakest members of society, the unborn, by striking down the ban on giving federal money to international groups that perform abortions or provide abortion information.

By his executive order, President Obama has overturned the Mexico City Policy which placed restrictions on funding abortions overseas, and U.S. taxpayer money will be used to perform these abortions. The U.S. Catholic Bishops, including myself, are greatly disappointed with this pro-abortion decision of our new President, and all American Catholics should express their outrage to President Obama for arbitrarily deciding to use millions of hard-earned tax dollars during these tough economic times to kill babies around the world, especially in Third World countries.

Obama has said he is anti-abortion, yet three days in Office, one of the first things he decides to do is fund abortion. This is on a par with someone who might say that he or she is in favor of gun control, and then provides funds to the NRA. No one spends money to support what one

Celebraciones Dominicales en la Ausencia de un Presbítero es un rito que la Iglesia provee como una respuesta a la necesidad de los fieles a reunirse para un rito dominical aun en la ausencia de un sacerdote. Estas asambleas deben de aumentar el deseo de los fieles de estar presentes y participar en la celebración de la Eucaristía.

¿Por qué se reúne la Iglesia en Domingo?

Los apóstoles aconsejaban a los fieles a que se reúnan los Domingos como miembros del cuerpo de Cristo. San Ignacio de Antioq observa que en la Iglesia primitiva los fieles estimaban el Día de Señor tanto que nunca omitían observarlo aun en tiempos de persecución.

El Concilio Vaticano II nos ha recordado que los fieles deben reunirse para celebrar el Día de Señor. Escurchiendo a la palabra de Dios y participando en la eucaristía los fieles recuerdan la última cena, la pasión, la resurrección, y la gloria del Señor Jesús y dan gracias a Dios que los hizo renacer a la vida eterna por la resurrección del Señor.

La asamblea de los fieles es llamada por Dios a manifestar a la Iglesia para celebrar a la unidad en Cristo. Juntos reciben la formación espiritual y la instrucción en el misterio pascual a través de las escrituras y homilía. La cele

Is ‘the fear of God’ a thing of the past?

By Thomas Burke

I was born in 1960 and reared in Las Vegas. It was a different time. The threat of the Cold War loomed. Parents taught their children to look for the Nuclear Fallout sign at hospital and bank buildings. The Vietnam War was ever-present. At no time did that War come to my front door than when a neighborhood man named Johnny Trimmer was drafted. He eventually came home, but was never quite the same, they tell me.

America in the 1960s was in the throes of the post-World War II era. Family was still the central theme across America. Divorce was rarely heard of...even in Vegas. Of course, celebrities came to Vegas for a divorce, but they didn’t call Las Vegas ‘home.’ So, to me, Hollywood was “sin city.”

In this time when the family was the central theme, I grew up with a keen sense of belonging. My mom watched out for each of us as well as the neighbor’s kids and, in return, other moms in the neighborhood watched out for me and my siblings, too.

I recall an incident that occurred when I was nine years old. It impressed the notion of a neighborhood family into my psyche in a way that I don’t witness enough of these days.

There was a K-mart Store approximately four blocks from my house and I would often walk there. In order to get to K-mart, I had to cross a few vacant lots as well as a drainage ditch. I will not soon forget one of my “K-mart runs.”

Upon my return, I was met at the front door by my mother, hands on hips and holding a dish towel. She angrily told me, “I know you were down the block breaking bottles in that vacant lot.” (I was always fond of throwing rocks and, I admit, the bottles beckoned.)

After returning from that vacant lot with a paper Safeway grocery bag filled partially with glass shards, I asked my mom, “How did you know it was me?” She told me, “Us moms...we talk. And, one of them called me and told me what you were up to.” From that moment on, I became aware that my “family” was much larger than I had thought. And, I recall this valuable lesson: Even though I was away from my watchful mother, morality was pretty much the same in every family and on every day.

These days, I visit with many people who are much younger than I. All too frequently, I observe that the keen difference between “right and wrong” of these young people has become less crisp and more blurred than when I was their age. It appears (from my unscientific
Annunciation of the Lord also proclaimed ‘Day of the Unborn’

By Bishop Michael Pfeifer, OMI

I have proclaimed the Feast of the Annunciation of the Lord, March 25, the traditional feast day of the incarnation honoring the conception of Jesus Christ, as the “Day of the Unborn.” This beautiful feast is also coming to be known as the “Day of the Unborn Child.” This date to honor the unborn was chosen because it falls nine months before the most celebrated birthday in history, the birth of Christ on Christmas. This symbolic interval of a full-term pregnancy reminds us of the reality and dignity of each human life from conception, beginning with day one when the unborn child is conceived.

The Christian feast of the Annunciation which announces the conception of the Christ Child in the womb of Mary, is a wonderful way to promote the universal cause of the sacredness of all unborn children who more and more are being threatened by the terrible evil of abortion. The “Day of the Unborn” reminds all to affirm the protection and care of unborn children as a religious and also as a secular cause.

The first human right of a human being is the right to life, and based on many passages of sacred scripture, we believe as in the case of the Word of God who took flesh in the womb of Mary, that every child from its first moment of conception is made in the image and likeness of God and demands respect, protection and the privilege of celebrating a birthday.

The Annunciation, which marks the first day of life of Jesus Christ in Mary’s womb, is an invitation to celebrate the first day of life of every child conceived in a mother’s womb. Hence, the Annunciation is a splendid day to mark the first day of conception of every human being under the title of the “Day of the Unborn.” As the Christian community recognizes and honors the conception and prenatal life of Christ who is God, then we should also celebrate each newly conceived child, even of an “unplanned” child.

The most important event of our life is our conception, for this is what makes all the rest of life possible, including our salvation. Likewise, if it were not for the Incarnation of Christ at His conception, there would be no atonement on the cross and no resurrection from the dead. Christ began his salvific mission of redeeming us and living a single life or previously married and currently married is steadily increasing.

In October 2007, the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate (CARA) at Georgetown University completed a survey of U.S. adults Catholics regarding marriage. This survey reveals the following statistics:

- 53% of adult Catholics (age 18 and older) are currently married.
- “The percentage of adult Catholics who have ever divorced is similar to the percentages of Americans who have ever divorced as estimated by the U.S. Census Bureau.”

These statistics have bolstered the resolve of the United States bishops in their commitment to marriage preparation.

The survey also explored the most common forms of marriage preparation utilized in parish ministry throughout the United States:

SAN ANGELO -- Over 100 people gathered January 28 to witness one of the rarest events in the Roman Catholic Church: the ordination of a married man, and a former Methodist and Episcopal minister as a Catholic priest.

Family and friends on hand at the diocese’s Sacred Heart Cathedral in downtown San Angelo received a taste of just how unusual Rev. Waldo Emerson ‘Knick’ Knickerbocker’s ordination was when San Angelo Bishop Michael D. Pfeifer open the proceedings by stating something of the obvious.

“I’ve never done this before,” he said to a smattering of chuckles. “Ordaining a man as a priest who is here with his wife, his children and his grandchildren. So I just hope I get it right.”

How rare is it?

According to Knickerbocker and wife Sandie, both of whom are lifelong students of both Protestant and Catholic theology, such an ordination has been performed in the United States only about 85 times and fewer than 100 times in the world since Pope John Paul II first allowed what the church refers to as a “pastoral provision.” The provision was adopted in 1981 especially for use in the United States. It has also been extended to England and other countries where bishops have requested special permission to ordain former married Anglican or Episcopalian ministers to the Roman Catholic Church.

One of those who attended the ordination was Fr. David Knight (www.hisway.com), who instructed the Knickerbockers in the faith early on, and prayed for them during their conversion discernment for 20 years.

“Why did I know Knick would make a good Catholic priest?” Fr. Night said. “Real simply, because he knows Jesus. If that sounds fundamentalist, we need a little more doctrine, rules and practices, no matter how deep, personal interaction with God. His religion is a "spirituality," not just a matter of doctrines, rules and practices, no matter how good these are.”

Knight said the Knickerbockers made Methodism look so good that it became obvious there is no real conflict between the soul of the Methodist Church and the soul of Catholicism.

In 1993-94, Rev. and Mrs. Knickerbocker became members of the Catholic Church.

in the Catholic Church and priesthood. Knick has the essential: he is in deep, personal interaction with God. His religion is a "spirituality," not just a matter of doctrines, rules and practices, no matter how good these are.”

After careful review and prayer, Fr. Knick requested to become a Catholic priest in September 2005.

“Catholics have the ‘full package,’ of course, but when I saw how the Knickerbockers lived out what we had in common, I realized that just ‘having’ it isn’t enough. They both lived and live more than most Catholics -- or the great majority of any Christians I know -- even recognize in our religion. So of course they recognized the “more” that we have, and now they will teach it to us!

“If I were Pope I would canonize John Wesley, then wait for Knick and Sandie to die and canonize them. Let the Methodists deal with having a Catholic Saint for their founder, and let the Catholics deal with learning Catholicism from a man and woman who learned Christianity in the Methodist Church!”

For 32 years, Knickerbocker taught Church History and Christian Spirituality on the faculty of Memphis Theological Seminary, a Cumberland Presbyterian school in Memphis, Tenn. After becoming a Roman Catholic, Mrs. Knickerbocker worked for Catholic Charities and then served on the staff of the Seminary in the Doctor of Ministry program.

'A future pregnancy would be too risky'

By Fr. Tad Pacholczyk

Various medical conditions can affect a woman’s ability to carry a pregnancy, and at times even threaten her and her child’s life. Some of these conditions include pulmonary hypertension, Marfan’s syndrome and certain congenital problems with the aorta. When a doctor informs a woman that she cannot become pregnant in the future without serious consequences to herself and her baby, having her tubes tied might seem to be the most appropriate response. Some would further argue that since the sterilization would be for ‘medical reasons,’ it would be an indirect sterilization and therefore morally acceptable.

Yet in point of fact, a tubal ligation to avoid a future pregnancy would not be an indirect sterilization at all. An indirect sterilization is a procedure that in treating an existing medical problem brings about an unintended loss of fertility in the process. For example, when a patient with cancer receives radiation and chemotherapy, a secondary and unintended effect may be sterility. Or when a man is battling testicular cancer, he may undergo surgical removal of the testes in order to fight the disease, with the undesired consequence that he will become sterile. Indirect sterilizations are morally permissible whenever there is a serious pathology involved, and when the contraceptive effects are unintended.

When a woman suffering from pulmonary hypertension chooses to tie her tubes, however, that tubal ligation does not address or cure her hypertension; she is, therefore, opting for a direct sterilization. When a man chooses a vasectomy because he is worried about transmitting a faulty gene to his offspring, he is, likewise, opting for a direct sterilization. A direct sterilization is morally unacceptable because it involves the decision to directly mutilate a healthy system of the body, one that is functioning normally and properly, for the sake of a contraceptive end. Such violations are commonplace today. In the United States, an estimated 700,000 women undergo surgical tubal ligations each year, and about 600,000 men undergo surgical vasectomies.

Vasectomies and tubal ligations do not treat any actually existing ailment or pathology. When a woman ties her tubes to render any future sexual acts infertile, she is choosing to mutilate a key faculty of her own body because she and/or her husband do not wish to practice periodic abstinence to avoid a potentially dangerous pregnancy. A tubal ligation under these circumstances would not, in fact, be for medical reasons, but instead, for reasons of marital convenience. We have a duty to respect the integrity and totality of our own bodies, and cutting healthy fallopian tubes in a woman’s body is never a morally defensible medical decision.

One of the key errors in thinking that stands behind the decision for surgical sterilization is the belief that men and women should not really be expected to have control or dominion over their sexual drives and impulses. So many today seem to have renounced the project of pursuing self-mastery within the domain of sexuality. While it is clear that we cannot survive without food or water, it is false to assume, as our culture seems to do, that we cannot survive without sexual gratification. Sex is not necessary for individual survival, nor indispensable for a healthy and fulfilled personal life. For a single person, in fact, a healthy and fulfilled personal life will depend on the proper ordering of the sexual faculties through the self-discipline of abstinence, and an attendant growth in virtue. This holds true in marriage as well, where spouses must pursue the discipline of sexual self-restraint at various times if the marriage relationship is to grow and flourish. They may have to practice such discipline under conditions of military deployment, work-related absences, and chronic or acute illnesses.

Whenever there may be legitimate reasons to avoid a pregnancy, as in the case of a serious threat to the life of the mother or child, married couples will be called upon to practice a similar self-discipline, by advert or only to those means of avoiding pregnancy that properly respect the gift of their sexuality and their respective masculinity and femininity. Practically speaking, this will entail choosing periodic abstinence during the known fertile times of the woman’s cycle as a means of avoiding a pregnancy. In the past few decades, the techniques of “Natural Family Planning” have become quite sophisticated and precise in their ability to determine when a woman is fertile. Married couples can use this information to limit sexual intercourse to infertile periods, and practice abstinence during fertile periods, when serious reasons warrant it. Respecting marital sexuality in this way, and refusing to compromise our sexual faculties through vasectomies or tubal ligations, promotes important personal virtues within marriage and properly respects the God-given and life-giving designs of our own bodies.
Helping Hands helps to tune of $1 million in ‘07

By Mary Hardin

Many people question why we spent over $1 million last year, especially in light of how strong our economy was. With unemployment the lowest in the country and employers begging for workers, how could there still be a need to assist with rent and utilities? Surely we must be helping those “too lazy to work?”

The housing shortage caused by so many people moving into town to take advantage of the abundance of jobs caused rents to skyrocket. Small houses that once rented for $750/month were now going for $1,500/month and even more. Many people saw their apartment rents actually double when their leases came up for renewal. These were not oilfield workers – they were the restaurant workers, the clerks and the laborers whose incomes hang in at around $10/hour. Huge increases in rent could not be absorbed into their already stretched budgets. We also had gasoline at over $3/gallon and increases in food costs and just about everything else. Many of our clients had already gotten second jobs to try to make ends meet.

Hit the worst were the elderly on fixed incomes (many of whom are trying to live on $600/month from Social Security). Also seriously affected are the disabled, again living on fixed incomes. Imagine living in an apartment where you were paying $350 per month.

When renewal comes around the rent has gone up to $675 or $700 and your gross monthly income is $600. The $350 apartment just doesn’t exist in Midland anymore. Rents go up but fixed incomes don’t.

Single parent families were also devastated by these increases. Imagine being a single parent, already stressed to the max by having to pay rent, utilities and childcare. All of a sudden you are faced with having to come up with another couple of hundred dollars a month to keep a roof over your head. Even if you are able to find a second job, the additional cost of childcare would eat up any profit you might make – not to mention you would never see your children.

Thanksgiving and Christmas food boxes were given to those families sent to us from MIDS’s Project Head Start counselors. They gave us 500 of Midland’s poorest families, all of whom fall well below the poverty level. Their children received new clothing and toys for Christmas. They are considered “high risk” families that are visited by the school system’s counselors on a regular basis.

Money for toys came to us from donations from the public. Clothing for these children were provided primarily by the parishioners from St. Stephen’s Catholic Church. Food was donated again, largely from St. Stephen’s parishioners, and also from Our Lady of San Juan, although several schools, Greenwood ISD, Midland Memorial Hospital, Midland County employees and many other local businesses held food drives for us.

We carefully screen those people asking for help through Agency Crosscheck. Agency Crosscheck is a database used by benevolence agencies in Midland that tracks histories on clients who receive help. When someone asks for help, we are able to look up his/her history in Crosscheck and find out who they have gotten help from and how much financial help they have gotten. We share our information with each other so that we can effectively “weed out” those people who are capable of working, but who are abusing the system.

Helping Hands was founded 10 years ago (Dec. 1998) by Monsignor James Bridges when St. Vincent de Paul was temporarily closed. It is non-denominational and is made up completely of volunteers. There are absolutely no paid positions in the organization.

Mary Hardin is the director of Helping Hands.

St. Stephen’s is the largest single financial supporter of Helping Hands. The parishioners collect around $40,000 for us each month. We are currently spending $15,000 per week to assist those in need with rent, utilities, medical, transportation etc. We also receive financial donations from several other charitable foundations, FEMA, other local churches and many, many from the public at large. Our Lady of San Juan has also started a monthly collection for Helping Hands and they had two hugely successful food drives for us during the holidays.

Pide perdón y perdona

por el Obispo Miguel Pfeifer, OMI

En Mateo 18, 21-35, Cristo nos da una de sus parábolas más importante y fuerte. Se trata del perdón y comienza con la pregunta que Pedro le preguntó a Jesús: “¿Cuántas veces tengo que perdonar a mi hermano—hasta siete veces?”

En Pedro, como en todo hombre, se da la contradicción. A veces se comporta como un hombre generoso, que se da sin medida; otras veces como un hombre mezquino y calculador. Quizá la pregunta surgio de una discusión entre los discípulos sobre el perdón. Recurren a su Maestro para resolver el asunto. Aquel día Pedro se sentía generos y sale con una cifra que en aquella cultura sonaba excesiva: “Si un hermano me ofende, ¿cuántas veces tengo que perdonarlo? ¿Hasta siete veces?” Pedro no le da un número al azar, escoge el siete, el número perfecto. Jesús ve a Pedro con ternura, le desbarata sus cálculos y le dice sin más: “No sólo hasta siete, sino hasta setenta veces siete”.

Una multiplicación que no da como resultado una cifra, más o menos elevada, sino un adversario: siempre. Pedro toma nota que el perdón no tiene un precio, una tarifa, unas limitaciones. Hay que pasar la vida perdonando. A todos. Todas las veces… Sin pensar: por esta vez, sí, pero ¿ya no más?; a este individuo, sí, pero a éste no. Siempre y a todos.

El perdón no es lo excepcional, lo que sucede pocas veces. Debe ser una constante, lo normal en la vida del creyente. Que el Señor nos dé su gracia para perdonar siempre y de todo corazón.

Letter from the Bishop

My dear Sisters and Brothers in Christ:

I first thank you for your constant generosity for the special collections that are taken up in our diocese to help many needy people and worthy causes in the Catholic Church within the USA and beyond.

By way of this letter, I appeal to you to be generous to the Annual Black and Indian Mission Collection that will be taken up on Sunday, March 1, 2009. The American Catholic Community has always reached out with generous hearts and giving hands to the Annual Black and Indian Mission Collection for 125 years.

Many churches and schools in the Native and African American communities depend on the annual evangelization grants to continue their programs and pastoral activities. Together, we can make a difference in the faith lives of our Black and Indian brothers and sisters when we support the National Collection. I encourage you to be generous in giving to this National Collection.

Thank you for your past generosity for this National Collection and let us pray for God’s blessings upon all the works of evangelization being done to assist our Native and African American brothers and sisters. God’s peace.

Your servant in Christ and Mary,
Most Reverend Michael Pfeifer, OMI,
Bishop of San Angelo

PRAYER SHARING

In a world where most people now own a computer ... why waste time when you are waiting for the screen to change, waiting for a download, etc.?

I have short little prayer reminders taped to my monitor. Praying makes my waiting meritorious!

Here are some suggestions: a “Spiritual Communion” prayer, prayer for the souls in purgatory, short indulgenced prayers, prayer to St. Joseph for a happy death, the Divine Praises.

So if waiting is something you hate ... gain graces while you wait!

Obama must speak from the heart, to the heart

By Father William J. Byron, SJ
Catholic News Service

Since Barack Obama won the presidency, he and his back-of-the-envelope brigade of wordsmiths were sculpting phrases and testing themes for his inaugural address. "We have nothing to fear but fear itself" and "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country" were chief among them.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, at age 50 and in economic circumstances that differed in degree, not in kind, from those the 47-year-old Obama faces today, opened his 1933 inaugural address by declaring: "This is a day of national consecration. I am certain that my fellow Americans expect that on my induction into the presidency I will address them with a candor and a decision which the present situation of our nation impels."

Then came the memorable words: "This great nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper. So, first of all, let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself -- nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance."

On Jan. 20, 1961, 44-year-old John F. Kennedy, speaking for a new generation that had survived the Great Depression and World War II, stirred idealism in the hearts of all Americans with the challenge: "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country."

Kennedy, as had Abraham Lincoln in his first inaugural, quoted from both the Old and New Testaments. And like Lincoln, Kennedy used the rhetorical "let" to begin no less than eight sentences of his own speech.

Much of the speech was indeed Kennedy's own, perhaps even the famous "ask not/ask" line about which his chief speech writer, Ted Sorensen, said, "I simply don't remember where the line came from."

Sorensen took no credit for it, and when asked about it, said simply, "Certainly the line reflected JFK's lifelong philosophy. Calling for sacrifice and dedication for the good of the country, emphasized by his own life of service -- that makes it his line."

I hope Obama continues to go door to door, in a manner of speaking, to connect with the American people. It is, after all, his manner of speaking that will characterize every speech he will give.

While Obama won't be going door to door to shake hands to win votes, or to discover, as he did when he was a community organizer, what the most urgent issues are, he now has to go door to door rhetorically (rhetoric is the art of persuasive communication) to connect with the hearts of his hearers.

I like to think of this as retail leadership. Lincoln did it with a skillful use of metaphor, imagery and stories. Roosevelt did it through his fireside chats.

Obama can do it well beyond his inaugural speech if he can find it in himself to speak from the heart to the heart.

Ending abortion: There is no time to lose!

By Tony Magliano
Catholic News Service

From the top of Capitol Hill in Washington, the scene was a sea of people marching for life. It was an uplifting sight for my oldest son Joe, 17, and me: over 100,000 pro-lifers demonstrating on behalf of our embattled unborn brothers and sisters.

Year after year we keep coming. I've participated in about 16 marches. But some very faithful souls have been coming every year since 1974, the first anniversary of Roe v. Wade and Doe v. Bolton. These two infamous U.S. Supreme Court rulings legalized abortion throughout all nine months of pregnancy nationwide.

As a result, approximately 50 million unborn babies have been brutally dismembered and murdered, countless women have suffered serious emotional and physical illnesses, and much of American society has grown increasingly indifferent to human suffering.

Now, on top of all this grief, the president of the United States has expressed his determination to continue and even expand this immoral mess.

On Jan. 22, President Barack Obama issued a very disheartening pro-abortion statement which read in part that government "should not intrude on our most private family matters."

However, government does intervene in private family matters when it detects child abuse. Yet, it illogically and immorally refuses to protect unborn children against the most brutal form of child abuse: abortion.

Adding insult to injury, on Jan. 23 Obama reversed the ban on federal funds to organizations that promote abortion in developing countries.

Now millions of tax dollars will be available to groups like the International Planned Parenthood Federation to help them perform their deadly deeds.

But worst of all, Obama has made it clear that he hopes to sign the Freedom of Choice Act. If it becomes law, FOCA would overturn virtually every federal and state limitation on abortion.

For instance, FOCA would invalidate laws that exist in some states requiring a parent to be notified before his or her minor daughter has an abortion. Informed-consent laws advising women on the risks of abortion, the father's legal responsibility to financially support the child and fetal development would also be overturned.

Participating in the U.S. bishops' postcard campaign to Congress to fight measures that support abortion is a good strategic start. But to stop FOCA, ongoing lobbying is absolutely essential.

We need to keep up the pressure!

On a regular basis please call (Capitol switchboard: 202-224-3121) and/or e-mail your two U.S. senators and your House representative, urging them to oppose the Freedom of Choice Act.

Also, regularly contact President Obama (White House comment desk: 202-456-1111/e-mail: www.whitehouse.gov and click "contact us"). Urge him to reconsider and reverse his support for FOCA. Ask him to establish a dialogue with the pro-life community.

Additionally, find out what's going on in your region and diocese. Get on your state Catholic conference's legislative alert list and contact your diocesan pro-life office.

Also, if you are physically able, there's something else you can do: Publicly witness to the humanity of unborn children and the brutality of abortion. An annual march is simply

Is there a Christian connection to Groundhog Day?

By Father John Dietzen
Catholic News Service

Q. I've been trying to learn the significance of Groundhog Day. I know we celebrate the Purification of the Blessed Mother on Feb. 2 (Candlemas Day), but I'm not sure why. Is there a connection? (New York)

A. Yes, there is an interesting connection between these celebrations. According to the law of Moses in the Old Testament, a mother was ritually unclean for a period of time after giving birth, 40 days after the birth of a boy, 80 days after the birth of a girl.

At the end of that time the mother came to the priest to be "purified" (see Leviticus 12).

Any firstborn male, human or animal, was considered to belong to the Lord. Animals were sacrificed. Human firstborn sons were presented in the Temple if possible, and certain payments were made that changed over time (see Exodus 34:19-20).

Both of these events, the purification of Mary and the presentation of Jesus, are commemorated on the same day. When they began to be celebrated in Rome, perhaps in the fourth or fifth centuries, the date was set on Feb. 2, 40 days after Dec. 25, the day the Roman church celebrated the birth of our Lord.
Obama urged to follow God’s will in prayer service

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Scripture readings, prayers and songs, many with a theme of following the will of God in service to the country and the world, launched President Barack Obama’s first full day on the job during an interfaith prayer service Jan. 21.

After a day and a night of celebrating the inauguration, Obama and Vice President Joseph Biden and members of the Cabinet began their term as their predecessors have, at the Episcopal-administered National Cathedral.

The Rev. Sharon E. Watkins, general minister and president of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in the United States and Canada, urged Obama and Biden in her sermon to remain centered on values that have guided the nation in the past: compassion, faithfulness, hope, truth and love.

The 90-minute prayer service included readings, prayers and songs led by two Catholic bishops, several rabbis, the president of the Islamic Society of North America, a Hindu leader and representatives of a dozen Christian churches.

“We, the nation that you serve, need you to hold the ground of your deepest values, of our deepest values,” said Rev. Watkins, the first woman to preach at the quadrennial prayer service.

In a sermon that quoted from the prophet Isaiah and Mahatma Gandhi, from a recent statement by Muslim scholars, from poet Emma Lazarus and diplomat, lawyer and writer James Weldon Johnson, Rev. Watkins noted that “in the days immediately before us, there will be much to draw us away from the grand work of loving God and the hard work of loving neighbor.”

“In international hard times our instinct is to fight — to pick up the sword, to seek out enemies to build walls against the other — and why not? They just might be out to get us. We’ve got plenty of evidence to that effect,” she continued.

“Someone has to keep watch and be ready to defend, and, Mr. President ... tag! You’re it,” Rev. Watkins said.

But the approach Isaiah urged for the Israelites is a path that suits today’s challenges, she said. “Work for the common good, for the public happiness and the well-being of the nation and the world, knowing that our individual well-being depends upon a world in which liberty and justice prevail.”

This is also the American way, she said: “To believe in something bigger than ourselves, to reach out to neighbor to build communities of possibility, of liberty and justice for all.”

The readings carried the theme of acting with love toward others, particularly those in need: Chapter 58, Verses 6-12, of the Book of Isaiah; Chapter 12, Verses 9-13 and 18, of St. Paul’s Letter to the Romans; and Chapter 22, Verses 36-40, of St. Matthew’s Gospel.

Washington Auxiliary Bishop Francisco Gonzalez read the selection from Romans.

Musical selections ranged from the national anthem and Aaron Copland’s “Fanfare for the Common Man,” to the classic hymn “Holy, Holy, Holy” and “He’s Got the Whole World in His Hands.”

Washington Archbishop Donald W. Wuerl read a prayer for the nation. It asked “that we may always prove to be ourselves a people worthy of this trust and pleased to do your will.”

It asked God to “save us from violence, discord and confusion, from arrogance and greed, and from every evil way.”

In his welcome, the Rev. Samuel T. Lloyd, dean of the cathedral, linked the inauguration of the first African-American president to the final sermon at a Sunday service by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., 40 years earlier. Rev. King preached at the cathedral, on the theme of being “co-workers with God,” a week before he was assassinated in April 1968, said Rev. Lloyd.

The invitation-only event was attended by members of Congress, extended family of the Bidens and Obamas and representatives of a wide range of faith groups. Former President Bill Clinton and Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, who was expected to be confirmed as secretary of state later in the day, sat with the Obamas and the Bidens in the front row of the cathedral.

Pro-life supporters call for change against Obama at march

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama and his vocal support of abortion came under fire from members of Congress, clergy and pro-life activists during the opening rally of the 36th annual March for Life.

For nearly two hours Jan. 22, a crowd estimated at 100,000 listened to three dozen speakers pledge to fight efforts to expand the availability of abortion and to oppose any increases in federal funding for agencies that perform abortions.

The crowd’s disdain for Obama’s views on abortion offered a sharp contrast to the exuberance that nearly 2 million people showered on the 44th president at his inauguration on the very same grounds 48 hours earlier.

Speakers took an almost defiant stand against the new president in pledging to reverse the 1970s era Supreme Court decisions of Roe v. Wade and Doe v. Bolton that recognized abortion as a constitutional right and overturned state laws against abortion.

Rarely mentioning Obama by name and referring to him repeatedly as “Mr. President,” Nellie Gray, president of the March for Life Fund which annually sponsors the march, invited the nation’s first African-American leader to discuss “important changes” in his stance “and we want to discuss that today.”

To become a president of all people, as he has pledged, Gray urged the president to take steps to end legal abortion during his presidency.

“Mr. President, you are a great orator, and we appreciate the great words ... but you must also be a great doer of the deeds to overturn the illicit Roe v. Wade and fulfill your responsibility to make right and proper changes as president of the United States and president of all the people,” she said.

Obama issued a statement Jan. 22 saying the Roe decision stands for the broad principle that “government should not intrude on our most private family matters.”

The president reiterated his position that he is “committed to protecting a woman’s right to choose” and called for both sides to work toward common ground to prevent unintended pregnancies, reduce the need for abortion, and support women and families in the choices they make.

More than two dozen Republican members of Congress also were on hand, speaking a total of 45 minutes about their plans to introduce legislation to limit funding to agencies performing abortions, overturn Roe v. Wade or fund programs that support pregnant women, giving them a better chance of carrying their children to term.

appointed parochial vicar of the new parish of Holy Trinity. Bishop Pfeifer personally came to install them as well as the pastoral coordinator, Mr. Richard Light.

Now, a year later on February 1, 2009, at the celebration of the Holy Eucharist at Immaculate Heart of Mary, presided over by Bishop Pfeifer, people who regularly worship each Sunday at different locations came together to pray and serve in their own language in music ministry, altar servers, hospitality (ushers, greeters), environment, lectors, and Extraordinary Ministers of Holy Communion. Afterwards a reception with refreshments was held in the church hall giving further opportunity for community building.

The local council of the Knights of Columbus and the 4th Degree Council of Knights of the area were the honor guard for the bishop.

Bishop Pfeifer also blessed the new center for the St. Vincent de Paul Society, as these members volunteer their time and talents to share their love and care for those who are in need. Jesus said, “Whatever you do to the least of my brothers and sisters, you did to me.” Through consolidation into one parish, the society has grown in its care for and concern for the poor and needy of all people, regardless of religion, ethnic origin, race, or color.

This celebration of unity was a giant step in the first year milestone of the vision as one faith community. The long-range vision includes the building of one church building to be the center of worship. It would have to be large enough to serve the 1000 family parish.

When Bishop Michael came a year ago for the installation, he used the symbol of a glass half full of water. In fact, he asked if the glass was half full, or half empty. The answer reflects our vision of the parish. Are we confident and hopeful and positive in our view?

This time he showed a similar glass, with a little more water in it. He asked our opinion: Does this reflect that we have grown in our final goal of being complete (Please See BIG SPRING/17) bración del sacrificio eucarístico expresa el sacrificio de Jesucristo para el perdón de los pecados. Entonces el Domingo es el día primordial que se debe de celebrar en la forma más completa posible. Otras celebraciones no deben de tener preferencia sobre la celebración dominical.

OBISPO

¿Cuándo celebra este rito una parroquia? La Diócesis de San Angelo reconoce que en el caso en que un sacerdote esté ausente por causa de enfermedad o por otra razón seria e inesperada y que otro sacerdote no pueda suplirlo, la misa domínico no se podría llevar acabo. En casos así hay la posibilidad de tener una Celebración Dominical en la Ausencia de un Presbítero. Cuando hay una ausencia programada, se debe informar a la comunidad con anticipación a través de anuncios y boletines de la parroquia, y se debe proveer una lista con el horario de las misas celebradas en las parroquias vecinas. La comunidad debe ser catequizada sobre la importancia de celebrar unidos como comunidad local, alimentados por la Palabra, por la oración comunitaria y por la Comunión Sacramental.

Para usar estas celebraciones con regularidad, se necesita el permiso del obispo.

¿Cómo se celebra este rito?

La riqueza de la Sagrada Escritura y de la oración de la Iglesia se provee a fieles aun fuera de la Misa. Hay dos opciones para la celebración dominical en la ausencia de un sacerdote:

1. la Oración de la Mañana (Laúdes) o de la Tarde (Vísperas) de La Liturgia de la Horas.
2. la Liturgia de la Palabra

Ambas opciones pueden incluir la distribución de las sagrada comisión si hay suficientes hostias en el tabernáculo. Aunque nuestras normas diocesanas permiten estas celebraciones en caso de emergencia, debemos de recordar que estas opciones no se deben de considerar como la solución ideal a las circunstancias presentes ni como una forma de dejarse llevar a la mera conveniencia. Solo debe de haber cuantas celebraciones de estas asambleas como sea necesario.

¿Quién debe de dirigir este rito?

A través de su ordenación, el diácono tiene la responsabilidad de dirigir a la asamblea en oración; a él se le da la preferencia para dirigir estas asambleas dominicales en ausencia de sacerdotes.

Laicos que han sido elegidos, capacitados, y comisionados por el obispo tienen la responsabilidad de dirigir estas asambleas en la ausencia de sacerdotes y de diáconos. El nombre de los laicos que han sido asignados por el obispo ya deben de haber estado anunciados en el boletín de la parroquia. Estos ministros dirigen a la comunidad en virtud de su sacerdocio común que han recibido a través de su bautismo y confirmación. Los laicos nombrados para este ministerio deben de ver en el confiado a ellos no tanto un honor cuanto una responsabilidad y, sobre todo, un servicio a sus hermanos y hermanas bajo la autoridad del párroco. Estos ministros deben de ser personas que demuestren:

- una profunda reverencia a la eucaristía
- un apeo a las Sagradas Escrituras
- un fuerte deseo y habilidad de fomentar la participación en la oración
- una vida moral ejemplar y siguiendo las enseñanzas de la Iglesia
- una vida activa en oración
- una participación activa en la vida pastoral de la comunidad
- el compromiso al ministerio y el tiempo necesario

Mornings with my wife’s rude and insensitive parakeet

By Jimmy Patterson

I guess I should talk about my wife’s bird today. Karen named the bird “Skittle,” which in these days of Peanut Butter scares, is better than had she named it Reese’s Pieces I guess. But the darn thing is aggravating me lately because he yammers on at the most inopportune times. Like when I am napping. And when I am awake.

Anybody who's ever watched my semi-comatose recitation of the morning news at 6:35 a.m. on Channel 7 each weekday (during which some days I am actually conscious and other day’s I am not real sure), you'll know that recently it's been a little annoying because Skittle has decided to try to shoehorn his way into the limelight, squawking about all matters birds squawk about at 6:35 in the morning while on TV.

If you have been so lucky as to miss the early morning goings on, allow me to recap. The bird has chosen to begin his morning prayers while I am in the middle of talking on television. The morning report I deliver is done from my living room on a web cam that is part of my MacBook. The bird can be plainly heard and it has become somewhat disruptive. Short of moving the creature to another room every day (or setting it free accidentally the next time my wife goes out of town for a weekend) I don't know what to do anymore.

I tried asking him: How would you like it if I talked over you when you were trying to read the news every morning? And he just looked at me with that big dumb bird look on his face. Like he's all innocent. And then looked at him again and said, "Huh? How would you like it?" and he gave me one of those head cocks that birds and dogs are famous for. Like he knew nothing about what I was talking about or probably more like I was stupid for talking to a bird.

So I tried to calm him down by reading to him a selection from "Chicken Soup for the Parakeet Soul" and that only seemed to upset him even more.

And so I went out and bought a new copy of the runaway NY Times Bestseller, "The South Beach Parakeet Diet" and I just sorta hold the book up outside his cage for him to look at and so far that has worked better than anything else. Birds apparently have a keen understanding and a natural dislike for being cooked alive (sorry, PETA people). Only problem is that now that he knows I have a copy of a healthy parakeet cookbook, he may not come out and try to fly away even if the door is left wide open.

If the South Beach book is ultimately viewed by the bird as being a dry and empty threat used in an attempt to get him quiet in the morning, I don't know what my next course of action will be.

In the time since the original disturbing behavior by the bird, we have come to an accord. A mutual agreement. The bird stays quiet while I’m on TV. And I let it live. So far it’s worked out well.

Karen’s suggestion on how to resolve the situation is this: "When you uncover his cage in the morning," she said, "say good morning to him and call him by name. Say, 'Good morning, Skittle, how are you doing this wonderful morning?'

I'd really feel a lot more comfortable having to just scream the news above the bird's random incantations every morning rather than lower myself to talking to a bird first thing everyday, especially if I have to use the word 'wonderful' in the conversation.

Ain't gonna happen. I rarely even speak to people until about 10. And I never use the word 'wonderful' before noon.

Jimmy Patterson is the editor of the West Texas Angelus. He and his wife have three children, two dogs and a very loud and annoying bird.

Parenting and respecting children's privacy

By Bill and Monica Dodds

Congratulations to the parents of today! You're pioneers. You face challenges your folks and grandfolks couldn't even imagine.

In the not-so-distant past, major family privacy issues probably included someone listening in on the telephone's party line. (And if you think that was some sort of 1-900 number, you need to ask your elders what a "party line" was.)

Privacy problems could also include a little brother finding his sister's diary and discovering it didn't really need a special key to open it. Just about any slender strip of metal could jimmy the lock. (A bent fork time, for example.)

Not so in 2009. As you well know. Now it's a brave new world when it comes to teaching children about preserving their own privacy and about respecting the privacy of others.

You know why: cell phones with built-in cameras, Web cams, YouTube, instant messaging, MySpace, personal blogs, Second Life and countless other sites and applications that youngsters and teens learn about, visit and use long before mothers and fathers become aware of those technologies.

No doubt you're familiar with some basic tips for helping kids retain their privacy when they go online or post something there. But it's good -- for yourself and for your child -- to review them from time to time.

Yes, you did that "recently." But even a year or two can be ages when it comes to technology. And the differences between an 11- or 12-year-old and a 13- or 14-year-old can be huge.

Again, pioneering parents, you're at a new disadvantage because that 13-year-old may know more about the digital gizmos and their software than you do. Not so in years past with the family camera, radio or television set.

Today's situation is a two-edged sword. You're pleased your children so easily live in the digital world (and, truth be told, at times can act as the family IT specialist) but it's a worry that their knowledge can include how to get around the appropriate safeguards you set up.

One thing that hasn't changed when it comes to parenting is that it's Mom and Dad's responsibility to keep an eye on what the kids are doing and, if rules are broken, to dish out the appropriate consequence.

And, of course, those rules and consequences are clearly spelled out ahead of time and understood by all parties.

And, as in the past, it's tough to play the bad guy when it comes to parenting but there's just no substitute for it. The old truth still applies: Your child has lots of friends but you're his (or her) parent.

A final point, one more you already know: Children -- from tots to teens -- can have incredibly bad judgment because they're children. Their still-growing brain says "act first and think later," if it says "think" at all.

They may need reminders that respecting another person's privacy means not posting that comment about a classmate who ...

Not covertly recording that video of the teacher who ...

Not ... whatever it is "everyone's doing" that can cause embarrassment (and even worse) to another person.

The two animated characters from A.A. Milne's "Winnie the Pooh" are as alike as Madagascar and Antarctica. Tigger, a jolly tiger with an optimistic attitude about the world, bounces around on his springy tail. Eeyore, the purple donkey, is dismally gloomy at all times. He never expects anything to go right and has a pessimistic worldview.

A lot of people automatically favor Tigger, mostly because his bouncy, flouncy and trouncy attitude toward life is all about, as he says, "fun, fun, fun!"

Others choose Eeyore, echoing the sawdust donkey's thoughts that a day is just something to get through, and that there aren't any good ones at all. It's not very fun to be Eeyore, but at least he doesn't get in trouble.

At their best, Tigger-like people consistently show a shiny face to the world, optimistically taking on challenges with a bounce in their step regardless of whether those challenges are advisable or not.

Eeyore types display a suspicious eye toward those challenges, tending to stick with what they know, acting cautious and not expecting much to happen.

Tiggers feel like they can do anything. The trouble with Eeyores is that they don't even try.

One of the reasons that A.A. Milne's books have been so popular over the years is that they speak to kids, adults and teens alike with lessons about friendship and attitude. No matter what happened, Tigger, Eeyore and the others stuck together, supporting each other through pessimism and optimism alike.

Every single one of Pooh's friends, Tigger and Eeyore included, knew about his love of honey and honey pots. Tigger often helped Pooh to obtain the honey even though he didn't like it. But when Pooh found a particularly difficult pot to access, it wasn't Tigger who warned the "silly old bear" that his hand might get stuck; it was Eeyore.

Still, many times, people automatically identify Tigger as the "better" character. After all, they say, he's more fun, and his sunny attitude is more attractive.

Sure, wallowing in Eeyore-like pessimism is a self-perpetuating condition that brings on -- not banishes -- stormy weather. Self-pity isn't pretty; it's like a huge iron anchor attached to your ankle, slowing you down physically and emotionally.

But Tiggers have very little perspective. This can turn fun into danger at the drop of a hat.

In one Pooh story, Tigger is challenged by Roo to climb a tree. He responds that "climbing trees is what Tiggers do best," even though he'd never done so before. He found three-quarters of the way up, hanging precariously to a broken branch, that he hadn't considered that once he climbed the tree he had to shimmy back down.

So Tigger doesn't know his limitations and Eeyore is trapped by them. They're both stuck in a very unhealthy place.

Maybe the right path through the "100 Aker Wood" of our lives is somewhere in the center: optimism tempered with realism. If we know our limitations, we can climb the tree, like Tigger, and get back down, like Eeyore.

emotional connection to the parish that gives people a sense of belonging.
“In the modern world, which is loosely defined as being before the mid-'60s, people came to worship to know more about God. In our post-modern world of today, people come to worship more to experience God”
Engagement is important, McCarty said, because more often than not it leads to spiritual commitment.
“In most cases,” he said, “belief does not lead to belonging, belonging leads to belief.”
McCarty grouped members into three different types: engaged, not engaged and actively disengaged. The latter category includes what McCarty called “Chireasters, those who only walk into a church at Christma(s, Easter and for weddings and funerals. Studies show 49 percent of all Catholics are not engaged and a whopping 35 percent are actively disengaged. Only about 16 percent are engaged.
How can people be led to reengage? The key, McCarty said, is in the cross.
On Holy Thursday, Jesus breaks bread and washes feet, an example of showing a sense of community during Christ’s darkest hours. “If church communities are going to recapture that image of what it means to be a Eucharistic people and to be Catholic in its wholeness and Eucharistic people of justice that’s the kind of community people want to be a part of.”
“We are at our best when we center on the Eucharist and that should lead us to service in the community and a broader sense of justice in the community,” McCarty said.

Honor to You on this your day
Glorious Angels, light of the Way

study) that the glint of the “moral compass” that was gifted to me and raised to the level of my eyes on many occasions has not been studied as closely. Ah! Morality remains. But, the “moral compass” that were intentionally passed on from generation to generation have all but been misplaced. Those “moral compasses,” in which everyone’s needles seemed to point in nearly the same direction, were expected to be referenced at least twice before making moral decisions.

Recently, I’ve begun to ponder what might have happened differently as Americans collectively passed from the 1960s to now. I recall that parents of my mom’s and dad’s generation used to gauge the success of their parenting on how their children (young and old, alike) lived moral lives. They seemed to be conscious and aware and proud that they were part of the formation of any and all neighborhood youth by figuratively opening their “moral compass” and figuratively holding it beside the young person’s “moral compass”...as though they were re-calibrating it in some way. To me, it was another of life’s lessons that the “moral compass” was something like a priceless vase or grandpa’s gold watch.

In our modern times, many moms and dads work tirelessly to polish a lens of morality for their children to reveal the glint and direction that the “moral compass” offers. Yet, it takes more than two dedicated people to form someone into an adult. Unfortunately, too many neighborhood moms and dads seem to have succumbed. Perhaps it is their fear of reprisal from the person with questionable behavior or the parents who have transferred their anger and frustration of parenting by accusing the outsider of judging their child, meddling in things that are not their affair. Perhaps it is their feasting on abused cliches like “it’s not my kid” or “it’s not my job to tell that kid what to do.” Whatever the mixed-up reasoning, one thing stands clear for me: I long for the day when a vast majority of moms and dads would participate actively in passing an imaginary “moral compass” to children...no matter whose they were. In those days, I think that more people felt as though they were part of the warp and the weft of the fabric of society. To me, in those days, I think that more people felt as though they belonged.

JUSTICE: Society advocates greed at the expense of others

- Valentine Dinner for Homeless at Wesley Soup Kitchen: Peace Ambassadors. Feb. 14, 11-1 p.m.
- Community Picnic with Cooperative Play: April 4, 10-1 p.m.

All proceeds from the events will cover costs and go toward future Peace Initiatives for the community.

We don’t have to look far to see that our lives, community and our society is in great need for the Spirit of Peace and Justice. Violence has permeated our society. “We glorify violence in our media, programming our children and our citizenry through daily exposure to T.V. shows, movies, computer games, books, newscasts, and toys that display violence as a suitable or even “cool” way of solving our problems” (Louise Diamond, Courage for Peace, pg. 8).

We are an adversarial society with an “us” against “them” mentality. This mindset creates an argumentative way of life; a life of separateness, and competition. Not only do we argue with other countries, we argue with each other about right and wrong, and we argue with ourselves. We have created an inner battle ground in our minds questioning our self-worth, our value, our ability to be loved and our body image. We have become a divided society in the land which professes love, peace, and indivisibility. We are also a consumption society. We are a society which advocates greed at the expense of others. The accumulation of more “stuff” is our driving past time. We participate in consumerism without thought to the impact our greed has on our planet, our children, and the other people and countries which produce our stuff.

Constant buying, shopping and accumulating keep us from looking within and without with compassion and understanding and finding the deeper and higher meaning of life.

Life in our society, in our families, schools, communities and in our minds has become a battlefield of the “haves” and the “have-nots.” We have forgotten that there is a better way to live. We have forgotten what our spiritual masters have taught throughout the ages: We are All One; All of Life is Sacred; the Kingdom of God is Now; the Kingdom of God is Within; Blessed are the Peacemakers; The World is our Family; Do no Harm; Love Thy Neighbor; Moderation in All Things; and the list goes on.

It is our intention in honoring this Season, to offer and teach practices, activities, and programs which address common factors that are at the root of peace-building in order to create a more aware, just and peaceful community. In so doing, it is our hope to effect change in ourselves, the lives of the citizens of San Angelo, and in our world.

OBAMA: Reversal of Mexico City policy only the beginning of abortion agenda really abhors. The day before his inauguration, the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops made public a letter sent to Obama asking him to retain the Mexico City policy.

Obama’s action came one day after the 36th anniversary of the landmark Supreme Court’s ruling in Roe v. Wade that legalized abortion. This anti-life onslaught is the first step in Obama’s abortion agenda. The worst is to come, because Obama, in his campaign, stated that he would sign into law the most terrible abortion bill ever, if it is passed by Congress. This deadly piece of legislation is known as the Freedom of Choice Act [FOCA]. All U.S. Catholic Bishops have asked all Catholic people of the parishes of the United States to sign campaign cards to be sent to Congress asking our Representatives and Senators to never pass such terrible legislation that will remove all restrictions on abortion and sadly make abortion a fundamental right.

In a move related to the lifting of the abortion rule, Obama is also expected to restore funding to the U.N. Population Fund [UNPF]. The Bush Administration had barred U.S. money from the Fund, contending that its work in China supported a Chinese family planning policy of coercive abortion.

More than ever we need to pray to our God to bring an end to the terrible scourge of abortion that kills the unborn made in the very image and likeness of God. We need to plead with our President Obama to stop using taxpayer money to fund abortions and invite him to listen to his own campaign words saying he is anti-abortion. So far his actions gravely contradict his words. To counteract the terrible evil of abortion right in our own Diocese, we also need to become much more involved in writing letters and articles to the local media and work for laws that will bring an end to abortion.
MARRIAGE PREPARATION: Many waiting to help couples in preparation process

Among currently married Catholics, those most likely to say they found the marriage preparation program to be “very helpful” to their marriage were those in a weekend program (28%), those meeting with a Catholic mentor couple (26%), and those in classes occurring over several nights (24%). Fewer of those who participated in one-day marriage preparation programs (16%) or who completed a pre-marriage assessment inventory (18%) found these to be “very helpful.”

Because it is the law of our Church (Canon 1063, 2) that marriage preparation is the responsibility of the pastor, the Diocese of San Angelo assists the pastor in fulfilling his responsibility by coordinating and developing three marriage preparation programs: Engaged Encounter weekend retreats, Sponsor Couples and Natural Family Planning (NFP).

Perhaps the most visible preparation program in our Diocese is the Engaged Encounter weekend retreat that is hosted by the King Retreat Center. Each year, the Retreat Center offers five or six of these retreats. Leadership in this ministry includes:

condenados a un estado estético a perpetuidad, atrapados en el tiempo, en la cruel desolación de los orfanatos de nitrógeno líquido. A raíz de esto muchos padres y madres enfrentan después dilemas atormentadores respecto a qué hacer con sus hijos en animación suspendida. Una vez impuesta esta injusticia vienen otros a argumentar a favor de una ofensa aún más flagrante contra la dignidad de estos embriones, esto es, destruirlos con tal de extraer sus células madre.

El argumento de que los embriones “se tirarán de todos modos” ha sido muy eficaz para convencer a legisladores y políticos para que favorezcan a los científicos interesados en usarlos en la experimentación. Fruto del pragmatismo estadounidense que busca “maximizar los rendimientos de la inversión”, la subyugación de los embriones es casi total en nuestra sociedad al reducirlos a simples “cosas”, objetos que se pueden manipular, valiosos por lo que pueden aportar a los intereses y deseos de los demás.

Recurrendo al argumento de que los embriones se tirarán de todas formas, el Dr. Chi Dang, profesor de medicina en la Escuela Médica de la Universidad Johns Hopkins, dijo en una entrevista reciente: “La pregunta es: ¿Es éticamente más aceptable destruir estos embriones echándoles ácido encima, o reorganizar estas células aglomeradas y así crear nuevas líneas celulares que podrían beneficiarnos en el futuro?”. Cuando empezamos a promover este tipo de falsas dicotomías y a construir una ética de castillos de arena, es que ya estamos cayendo en la complacencia, en una especie de letargo moral respecto a nuestros deberes elementales para con los humanos más débiles y más pequeños.

Gary Rosen escribía en una ocasión en el New York Times que un curso de Ética para Principiantes bastaría para hacernos ver cuál es el problema aquí, es decir, que no debemos tratar a otras personas como medios para nuestros propios fines sino como fines en sí mismos. Sin embargo, hasta la ética más básica parece difícil de cuadrar con las frías y bien estructuradas discusiones clínicas sobre “aprovechamiento de embriones” y “reorganización de células aglomeradas”. Aunque el vocabulario de los científicos investigadores de células madre y quienes los apoyan se mantenga completamente académico, no por eso deja de tener, en palabras de Rosen, “un inconfundible olor a canibalismo”.

En Estados Unidos necesitamos urgentemente una Ley de Protección al Embrión. La tentación de negar la humanidad de nuestros propios hermanos sigue presente y nos trae resonancias de tiempos pasados, cuando con fines de representación en el congreso los esclavos equivalían a sólo tres quintas partes de una persona. Tratar al ser humano como si no valiera ni una quinta parte de una persona es una violación, más deplorable aún, de los derechos humanos. Los integrantes más pequeños de nuestra familia humana merecen protección legal. Leyes como las de Alemania e Italia, aunque no podrían detener todas las injusticias contra los embriones, si impedirían que se llegue aún más lejos con otras formas de barbarie en el laboratorio y de explotación humana, evitando así que esto se convierta en la norma.

CELEBRATION: Leaders of prayer should be reverent

(From 4)

When does a parish celebrate this rite? The Diocese of San Angelo recognized that in the exceptional case when a parish priest is absent due to sickness or for some other serious reason, and when another priest cannot take his place, a complete celebration of the Eucharist on Lord’s Day may not be possible. On these occasions, the Sunday Celebration in the Absence of a Priest may be used. When there is a scheduled absence the parishioners are to be given advance notice by way of announcement and parish bulletin and provided with a list of Mass times celebrated in the surrounding area. They are to be catechized as to the importance of celebrating together as the local community, nourished by the Word, by common prayer and by sacramental Communion. To have these on a regular basis requires the permission of the Bishop.

How is the rite celebrated? The riches of Sacred Scripture and of the Church’s prayer may be amply provided to the faithful in various ways apart from the Mass. Two options are provided for Sunday worship in the absence of a priest:

1. a celebration of Morning or Evening Prayer from the Liturgy of the Hours;
2. a celebration of the Liturgy of the Word.

Both options may include the distribution of Holy Communion if there are a sufficient number of hosts in the tabernacle. Although our diocesan policy allows these celebrations to be held in an emergency we are reminded that these options should not be regarded as the ideal solution or as a surrender to mere convenience. There should normally be only one assembly of this kind in each place on any given Sunday.

Who are the leaders of prayer for the rite? Through ordination the deacon has responsibility of the leading the prayer of the assembly; therefore, preference is given to the appointment of deacons as leaders of prayer when the parish gathers for one of the Sunday Celebrations in the Absence of a Priest. Lay people who have been appointed, trained and commissioned by the bishop have been given the responsibility of leading worship in the absence of a priest or deacon. The names of the parishioners who have been appointed leaders of prayer by the bishop should have been listed in your parish bulletin by now. A lay person leads the prayer of a community by virtue of the common priesthood that each Christian shares through baptism and confirmation. They should regard the office entrusted to them not so much as an honor but as a responsibility, and above all, as a service to the parish under the authority of the pastor. Those chosen for this ministry should not merely be “volunteers.” Leaders of prayer are persons who exhibit:

- a deep reverence for the Eucharist,
- living appreciation of Scripture,
- strong desire and ability to foster participation in worship,
- life consistent with the Gospel, an exemplary moral life in good standing according to the laws of the Church,
- an active prayer life,
- active involvement in the pastoral life of the community,
- a spirit of cooperation with the members and pastoral leaders of their parish,
- acceptance by members of the community,
- a willingness to be trained and receive continued instruction for this ministry.

UNBORN: March 25 to celebrate beginning of human life from the very first moment that He was conceived in the womb of His mother, Mary. The reflection on the reality that Christ’s Incarnation began at His conception in Nazareth, is a reminder of the sacredness of every conception which is the beginning of every human life.

Historically, the Feast of the Annunciation has been regarded both as a feast of Christ and Mary. It would be difficult to speak of the Unborn Child without mentioning Mary. The day that Christ was conceived, the day that Christ became Incarnate, reminds us of Mary’s faith reply of total surrender to God with her “yes” – “Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it done to me according to your word.” All Christians can readily agree that both for Jesus and Mary, and the whole human race, the moment when God became man in the womb of the Virgin at Nazareth is the most inspiring event of history and should also be commemorated, under the title of the “Day of the Unborn Child” especially today when prenatal life is under such grave attack.

I am asking that the Feast of the Annunciation, celebrated on Wednesday, March 25, 2009, also be known as the “Day of the Unborn Child” in our Diocese. On this beautiful day when we celebrate the beginning of the life of Jesus Christ and the beginning of each human life, I ask that all the priests of our Diocese celebrate Mass first to thank and honor Jesus with his dear mother for accepting to become one of us to bring us God’s love and salvation, but also for all the unborn of our Diocese and the world. Also, I encourage all of our priests to especially invite all couples who are expecting babies to be present to receive a special blessing for each little one waiting to be born. At their meeting in November, 2008, the U.S. Catholic Bishops approved a rite of blessing for the unborn. This should also be the occasion to stress the dignity and sacredness of all human life, from its first moment of conception, and to encourage all people to become more involved in the pro-life movement. I ask that this information be published in our bulletins and be shared from the pulpits.

BISHOP: As Christians, we believe that life begins at conception of man’s knowledge is not in a position to speculate as to the answer.” Then the High Court went on to admit a key admission: “If this suggestion of personhood is established, the appellant’s case, of course, collapses, for the fetus’ right to life is then guaranteed specifically by the 14th Amendment.”

The fact is that the 14th Amendment couldn’t be clearer. “…nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law, and or deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law.”

Furthermore, the 14th Amendment says: “Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.” Pro-lifers, this is exactly what a “Life at Conception Act” would do. This simple, logical and obviously right legislation of course will not become law without much discussion and social and political pressure. More than ever, it is important that pro-lifers pick up the banner of this cause and do everything we can to press for this special Act.

If all pro-life activists put out enough pressure, pro-lifers can force politicians from both parties who were elected on pro-life platforms to make good on their promises and ultimately send a “Life at Conception Act” to the President’s desk. But even if a Life at Conception Act doesn’t pass, immediately the public attention will send another crew of radical abortionists down to defeat in the next election. Either way, the unborn win…unless we do nothing.

It is our belief as Christians, based on biblical principles, and the constant teaching of Catholic Church that all human life begins at conception and that life is sacred and precious to God. Our position is that all human life has a special dignity and sacredness and must be respected from its very beginning until its natural end as determined by God. The Gospel of Luke brings out clearly how the unborn life is seen in the inspired Word of God. When Mary and Elizabeth came together for a loving visit, there was an interaction between two precious unborn in their wombs. One of these little ones, Jesus Christ, the Son of God, was only a few days old. He was only an embryo, but the inspired Word of God brings out the preciousness of that unborn life. What God said about the unborn life in that passage God says about what is conceived in the womb of every woman, “Blessed is the fruit of your womb.”

The deadly Roe v. Wade decision has brought the destruction of 45 million unborn children through abortion. However in the Roe v. Wade decision, the U.S. Supreme Court declared it cannot resolve the difficult question of when life begins. On the basis of the doubt itself raised by the Supreme Court, the 14th Amendment of the Constitution brings clarity as regards the respect to be shown to the unborn person, “…nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law.” If this position of personhood of the unborn is established, the appellant’s case of course collapses, because the fetus’ right to life is thereby guaranteed specifically by the 14th Amendment. Science is clear that human life begins at conception when a new human being is formed, and most American people oppose abortion-on-demand and want innocent life to be protected especially when it is most defenseless. Hence, this is the time for all of us to express ourselves loudly and clearly that we favor a “Life at Conception Act,” declaring unborn children as persons legally entitled to constitutional protection.
Catholics mourn passing of longtime leader, former San Angelo Bishop Thomas Tschoepe

The Diocese of Dallas

Bishop Kevin J. Farrell, the seventh bishop of Dallas, today spoke for Catholics throughout the diocese, "We mourn the passing of a wonderful leader, bishop and priest. Bishop Thomas Tschoepe was instrumental in building up the Catholic Church in Dallas. He built churches to meet the needs of the growing Catholic population and established ministries and programs in English and Spanish that helped so many people to grow in their faith. I ask that all join me in prayers of Thanksgiving for Bishop Tschoepe's leadership, life and priesthood and that Eternal Light now shines upon him."

During Bishop Tschoepe's tenure in the Diocese of Dallas, he continued to enact the reforms dictated by Vatican II that his predecessor had begun to implement. The years immediately following Vatican II were times of great change. Bishop Tschoepe ministered to a flock that included Catholics who welcomed those changes as well as others who did not.

Ministry became very specialized as the church attempted to respond to new challenges brought on by Vatican II. Bishop Tschoepe also established many new diocesan offices including Diocesan Archives Museum, Family Life Office, a full-time Vocations Office, Deaf Apostolate, Diocesan Youth Ministry, Hispanic Ministry, the Archbishop Sheen Center for Communications and the Office for Pastoral Planning and Research. Other services were expanded, including the Catholic Schools Office, the diocesan newspaper, Texas Catholic, Catholic Charities, the Diocesan Tribunal and the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, which was established as the Office of Religious Education.

On December 12, 1976, Bishop Tschoepe promulgated the Vatican decree redesignating Sacred Heart Cathedral as the Cathedral Shrine of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Guadalupe (Catedral Santuario de Guadalupe). The Cathedral Parish had earlier been combined with Our Lady of Guadalupe Parish.

Prior to his appointment as Bishop of Dallas, Tschoepe served as chancellor and vicar general of the Diocese of San Angelo in 1966.

He is survived by three sisters: Vera Duesman and Clara Simmel, both of Pilot Point, and Bertha Holley of McKinney. He was preceded in death by a sister, Nettie Ross, and three brothers, Paul Tschoepe, John Tschoepe and George Tschoepe. He is survived by numerous nieces and nephews, including Rev. Msgr. Leon Duesman, pastor of St. Ann Parish, Coppell and Rev. Msgr. Jerome Duesman, pastor of Holy Family Parish, Irving.

The Vigil for the Bishop with Reception of the Casket was January 28, at the Cathedral Shrine of the Virgin of Guadalupe Dallas, TX, The Most Rev. Kevin J. Farrell of the Diocese of Dallas, presiding. A Memorial Mass was celebrated on January 28 at 7 p.m. in the Cathedral. The Mass of Christian Burial was January 29 in the Cathedral followed by Entombment at the Crypt of the Bishops located at the Main Altar located in Calvary Hill Cemetery in Dallas.
