SAINT OF THE WEEK:
ST. AGNES OF ASSISI
NOVEMBER 19
Born in 1197 in Assisi, Agnes was the younger sister of Saint Clare. She left home to join Clare even though her family was against it. When they tried to bring her back, her body became so heavy that several knights could not budge her. Her uncle tried to strike her but was temporarily paralyzed in his attempt. She was finally left with Clare. She and Clare were soon joined by other noblewomen of Assisi, forming the Poor Clares. There Agnes achieved perfection as a religious at a young age. She was eventually named abbess and, in 1219, was sent by Saint Francis to direct the Poor Clares at Monticelli. A surviving letter from Agnes to Clare clearly demonstrates her love of poverty and her loyalty to Clare’s ideals. In 1253, she was summoned to Clare’s deathbed. Three months later, Agnes followed her sister in death. Some thought these nuns were wasting their lives, but actually the opposite was true. The world has been greatly enriched by the example of these poor contemplatives.

Knowing the future has always been of paramount interest to people. The epitome of a Christian’s inquisitiveness in the future centers around what is commonly referred to as eschatology. Numerous books have been penned predicting the End Time and the return of Christ. Early Christians anxiously and hopefully awaited the fruition of the Kingdom of God with Jesus’ return. Over two thousand years later, Christians still long for the return of the Messiah and His Final Judgement. Fascinatingly, today’s Liturgy of the Word addresses this same issue that is embedded into Sacred Scripture with several layers of revelations couched in a “Rubik’s cube” of concealment that only the Father comprehends and masters.

In the first reading of today’s liturgy, an eschatological prophecy is issued by the prophet Malachi. Sacred Scripture assures the downtrodden and dispossessed that God will be victorious in the end. Written after the return from exile, the prophet pronounces a future judgement over the Temple authorities and rulers. They have abandoned the law of God and had adopted corrupt and self-serving methods. Malachi conveys God’s displeasure and warns all that they will answer for their deceit and greed. He assures the just that the Lord of Hosts will have His Justice over them with fire from which nothing will survive. At the same time, the prophet of God assures those who fear the Lord and follow His ways will experience “healing rays”. As with most Sacred Scripture, this prophecy has numerous interpretations. First, and foremost, it alludes to the End Time during which Christians believe the return of Christ will take place. Secondly, it confers confirmation on the coming of the Messiah and the inauguration of the Kingdom of God. Thirdly, it alludes to the destruction of the Temple, again. With this final destruction of the Temple will come the end of Jewish sacrificial rituals for forgiveness of sins leaving their faith apparently void of an important element. With this destruction, the traditional means of making reparation for sins impossible. This destruction will cause God to leave His residence on Earth and His Chosen People.

In the second reading from the second Letter of St. Paul to the Thessalonians, the behavior of Paul and his associates are described in order to encourage the newly converted to preserve in their faith and not to adopt the worldly model while living among the wicked. Paul exhorts the Christians to follow the model that has been set by him and others. The epitome of this model is Christ, Himself, who exhibited agape love – sacrificial love. This love is selfless and hard to do. It is exhausting and giving. It is a love that will enable a disciple to sacrifice his own life and pleasure for others with joy. Paul gives this advice as various sectors of the Christian community have become authoritarian and busy bodies. As a result, the Apostle to Gentiles and his assistants gently chastises them in order that these newly converted might not lose sight of their true goal as they await the anticipated Parousia.

It is this Parousia that is the subject of today’s Gospel according to Luke. Once again, couched in a description that describes future events, Jesus predicts the inauguration of a New and Eternal Temple as he describes the total destruction of the present. At the same time, embedded within this prediction, is an eschatological account that refers to a multitude of events and the final triumph of Good over Evil. Christ, knowing that the Second Temple will shortly be leveled by the Romans in A.D. 70, accurately and succinctly describes its final days and demise. This destruction will destroy the corrupted priestly power and send the Jews, once again, into exile. Unveiling this event, Christ continues to warn his followers of the persecution that they will encounter and give advice as to what their response should be. Finally, there is included a prediction of final victory of Good over Evil with a vindication for the righteous.

On this final Sunday before the end of the Church year of the Solemnity of Christ the King, Holy Mother the Church reminds all that our trials and tribulations are only temporary. They are the means by which our faith is tempered and strengthened. Despite what the world has to offer, the final outcome and reward is found in God. Through His strength, knowledge, mercy and love, creation will be restored to perfection and evil will be vanquished forever. The Church, united in prayer with Christ as its Head, will be victorious as Jesus is proclaimed, King of the Universe.
