A Reflection of the Gospel from Living Liturgy

2018: Now that we are in the third week of Easter, we hear yet another story of a resurrection appearance of Jesus. There are a number of different Easter stories that appeal to us on a variety of levels. Initially, the story was the finding of the empty tomb. Then, we had a story of the appearance of Jesus to the disciples without Thomas, followed by one with Thomas. Now we have another story where the risen Jesus eats a meal. He is said to have flesh and bones. His eating baked fish virtually confirms that.

Moreover, today’s gospel passage begins with a line that should not be neglected: the disciples recounted “how Jesus was made know to them / in the breaking of bread.” Of course, the Emmaus story precedes this in the Gospel of Luke. And Luke is telling his audience that the “breaking of bread” is the way Jesus is made known to the community. No longer is Jesus appearing to his assembled followers. That ended with the ascension. Instead, the community will now come together and experience Christ in the breaking of bread, or in what we call Eucharist.

The risen Lord is flesh and bones, a true human being, raised to new life by the power of God. We participate in that new life by consuming the bread broken and shared. The bread is nourishment and life-giving, as is Jesus himself. It is no wonder that the early Christians, like us, find Jesus made known in the breaking of bread.
