

The next generation of kids is the only one we've got.

The moms and dads around East 83rd street are betting all they've got on education but with the financial crunch, the odds are tough.

St. Adalbert Community School at 2347 East 83rd Street serves all the families in the East Central section of Cleveland from East 30th St. to East 110th. It is the largest and newest Catholic elementary school within the inner city teaching children of all faiths. It is one of the last oasis of gentleness in our city.

The St. Adalbert bus system services a large area on the east side.

Father Wilson Pastor and Sister Catherine Bardsley, Principal of St. Adalbert, consult over school matters.

Brother Richard Wise and Father Gene Wilson have spent a collective 9 years building the St. Adalbert community.

Through individualized instruction, some of our kindergarten students obtain a 3rd grade reading level within their first year.

Informal but supervised instruction plays a key part in the progressive educational style of St. Adalbert school.

A bi-racial staff develops and supports the future black leadership of Cleveland's east side community.

Science plays an important part in the development of future productive citizens.

St. Adalbert prepares young black men for a proper role in American society.

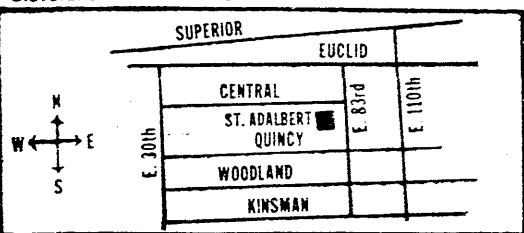

St. Adalbert's school is a key to the development of Cleveland's Fairfax neighborhood.

Recreation, along with Academic instruction is a necessary part of any child's development.

With an enrollment of 310 students, St. Adalbert's provides community services and worship services for Cleveland's inner-city.

Join with these parents, teachers and kids, and invest in a more loving community, a growth in greater Cleveland, a productive style of education and a faith in a better tomorrow.
