Dear Parish Family,

Our Scriptures this weekend focus on God’s mercy – an appropriate theme for this Extraordinary Jubilee Year of Mercy proclaimed by Pope Francis. In the reading from the book of Samuel, King David is called out by the prophet Nathan for his sins against the Lord. David doesn’t make excuses for himself; rather, he acknowledges his sins before God. David is assured of God’s forgiveness. Likewise, the woman in the gospel story weeps as she acknowledges her own sinfulness. She is “forgiven because she has shown great love.” Both these scenes lead us to understand more fully the working of mercy.

Pope Francis correctly points out that God is never tired of forgiving us. While that is true, the fruits of that mercy are not automatic. Something is required of us in this process of forgiveness – contrition or authentic sorrow for our sins. Both David and the woman have contrition for their sins. Both recognize they have offended God. For us to experience the mercy of God, we must do likewise. That is the great grace of the Sacrament of Penance.

For us to receive the graces of this wonderful sacrament of healing, we must acknowledge our sins and have sorrow for them. Every Confession requires that our acknowledgment of sins be complete (or what we refer to as integral Confession) since our previous celebration of this sacrament. This means that we cannot purposefully leave something out that we are aware of in our conscience. Doing so invalidates the entire Confession. From whom are we trying to hide something? God? Impossible! God knows and the priest in the confessional represents Christ who heals us like He did the woman in the gospel. The seal of Confession assures us that our sins are forgiven and forgotten. That is when we can experience in a most profound way God’s healing grace.

Along with acknowledging our sins (Confession) we must also be sorry for them (Contrition). This sorrow can be either imperfect (when sorrow stems from our fear of God’s punishment) or perfect (which derives from our love for God). When we offend someone we love dearly (a spouse, child, parent) our sorrow for that becomes a deep hurt in us until we can reconcile. That is perfect contrition. Our sins become a deep hurt in us until we can reconcile with God whom we love above all things. This is what the woman in the gospel had; it moved her to tears and caused her to perform her act of love for our Lord.

God then frees us from our sins through His mercy (absolution in the sacrament). He does this for David and the woman. There is, however, a penance for the sins – a satisfaction for them. This burden is not great but helps us to grow in works of charity toward God and neighbor. Let us therefore be grateful for God’s mercy, which endures forever. Let us respond to the prompting of the Holy Spirit to humbly acknowledge our sins and have contrition for them. Our loving and merciful God is always calling us to a deeper life with Him. How will we respond?

In Christ,
Fr. Joe Previte
