My Dear Parish Family:

From the point of conception new life is created, a baby takes form and begins his (her) life’s journey. Dependent upon his (her) mother’s nourishment, the child is secure in her womb. In the ideal world, once born, the infant’s parents become the child’s sole source of trust; they provide the necessary ingredients to reinforce the child’s sense of security. As the child becomes an adult, the journey has subjected him (her) to a world that embraces the accumulation of material goods, monetary success and a connectedness to oneself. If the adult chooses to embrace this lifestyle, then the trust once known as a child becomes mute; the adult now is likely to experience anxiety and frustration striving to achieve that which is fruitless.

As Jesus continues his Sermon on the Mount in today’s Gospel, He speaks to His disciples out of concern for their “little faith” and the lack of trust in God’s ability to provide for their needs. As a society it seems that one of our greatest challenges is to live in the present and to trust in the goodness and providence of God. God knows our needs and, in no way does He disregard the necessity to plan sensibly the use of resources to meet our future needs. Clearly we are warned, however, of the temptation of placing trust in material possessions in lieu of God.

Anxiety and frustration can overflow to obsessive worry over the state of another’s soul. We worry about our children, relatives and friends but, Saint Paul, in his letter to the Corinthians, reveals that we must leave judgment of another’s soul in God’s hands. Saint Teresa of Calcutta said, “Trust in the good God who loves us, who sees all, knows all, can do all things for my good and the good of all souls.” We can only let go if we trust in God and pray.

It takes great courage to journey with God, but when we walk in His footsteps, everything falls in place; even in times of trouble, we begin to see the meaning and the fruits of our experiences. If we trust only in ourselves, we fail. If we abandon ourselves to God’s Providence, He will never abandon us.

In the first reading, God is speaking to the people of Israel in exile who feared they had been forgotten. God reassured them that even if a mother forgot her child in the womb, He would never forget them. The gift God gives of new life is precious and vulnerable. That gift remains precious and vulnerable until that life returns home to God. God is our only constant from the moment we begin our journey in our mother’s womb to the moment God calls us home. We should cherish each day, void of worry, anxiety and frustrations. God has called each of us to holiness. We can achieve this if we follow HIS MAP of life….

“Pray, Hope and Don’t Worry.” (Saint Pio)
