My Dear Parish Family,

Today’s Scripture readings, when taken together, provide a very practical, reasoned and patient method for dealing with conflicts between believers. It should be noted that it only applies to disputing members of the Church and with regard to matters that are sinful, that is contrary to divine law. Under these conditions, there is the assumption that both parties, the perpetrator and the one bringing the sin to light, are working from the same moral code.

The Gospel outlines a three step process, the aim of which is to win back the errant brother or sister. Step one is take the private one-on-one, face-to-face approach. If that fails, then gather a couple of other witnesses to help make the case. Finally, if all else fails, make the issue public (within the Church, not on Facebook!) to impress upon the person the gravity of the matter and to protect the Church from unknown scandal. If this fails, then the directive is to “treat him as you would a Gentile or a tax collector.” At first blush, this sounds harsh; however, what it more commonly means is to treat them as one who no longer knows or shares your understanding of faith. It does not mean to treat them as dirt. Recall that Jesus called such as these to follow Him to the scandal of the self-righteous Sanhedrin.

Another thing to note is that nowhere is there included any gossip or speaking about the sinner rather than speaking with the individual. What is more, the reading from St. Paul’s letter to the Romans indicates the manner in which the conflict on divine law is to be resolved – with love. No matter which or how many of the commandments listed there may have been violated, the overriding commandment is “summed up in this saying, namely, ‘You shall love your neighbor as yourself.’” If we act and speak in genuine Christian love, then we have a much greater chance of winning back our brother or sister.

Finally, the first reading from Ezekiel reminds us we have a responsibility to our fellow believers to make them aware of when they stray. We cannot politely look the other way if we know a loved one is headed in the wrong direction. Though we are not culpable for their sin, we will be held responsible for our lack of action. We are our brothers’ keepers, in that regard.

What a wonderful scheme for reconciliation if we only had the fortitude to put it in practice. Imagine the number of litigating attorneys that would be looking for work!

Peace of Christ,
Deacon Bruce
