My Dear Parish Family:

Have you ever experienced a night when your heart and mind are restless, and you just can’t fall asleep? You might close your eyes for a short while, but then you awake again and again. The peace that was with you just a few nights ago is no longer resting in your heart. Something happened to affect you, but what would cause this restlessness?

Jesus has been speaking to us for weeks now on how we are to live if we want to be His disciples: we must love God above all else with all our hearts, our souls and our minds; we must love our neighbor as ourselves. God invites everyone to the wedding feast but not everyone responds; the least expected were chosen as guests. In today’s Gospel, Matthew identifies the Pharisees and scribes as having high positions; they had taken the chair of Moses. They preached and commanded that all the Jewish laws be followed which placed great burdens on the shoulders of the people. They expected special treatment and service without any consideration for the common people. Jesus tells His disciples that they are to observe the laws as preached by the Pharisees, but warns them not to act as they act.

Jesus’ words should mean something to you and me. Have we not witnessed leaders who preached the laws of the land but they, themselves, have not followed them? Have we not witnessed persons in authority preach about freedom of speech, but have refused to have those who labor for the sanctity of life and liberty for all people to speak at a public forum? Have we not witnessed officials in high positions abuse their authority by expecting special treatment just because of their title? There are many examples that we can give, but what you and I cannot forget are Jesus’ words: “Whoever exalts himself will be humbled; but whoever humbles himself will be exalted.” Think for a moment about this sentence. Those with authority who speak what may very well be of value, but their actions reflect differently, must be reduced to a place of not just knowing the meaning of God’s words, but living them to the fullest. Those who already act on the Words of Jesus Christ and accept His call to serve all people, will one day be exalted in the glory of His Kingdom.

Why are there times we can’t sleep; we have no peace? Possibly it’s because we’ve stopped listening and living the words of Jesus. Perhaps we’re struggling with someone or something that is drawing us away. Come back – come back to a God who loves you and me. In today’s responsorial psalm (131.1, 2, & 3), our response is, “In you, Lord, I have found my peace.” During this month of November, perhaps you can read about some of the saints who lived in service for others, following the way of the Lord, Jesus Christ, even if it meant giving their lives. Consider those in your own life and all the souls who have taught you the teachings of Jesus Christ, the difference between right and wrong, and have lived their lives accordingly. Look to our own Pope Francis, who not only writes documents and preaches on behalf of the poor, marginalized, and the most vulnerable, but is following the way of the Lord, Jesus Christ in humble service. To be at true peace, even in the midst of turmoil, we, too, must follow the way of the Lord, Jesus Christ in humble service.

In Christ,

Anne De Marco  Pastoral Minister

Our very own Campus Minister Steve Perry will be talking to us about Dr. Gary Chapman’s research into the Five Love Languages and how it can affect our relationships with other people, as well as our relationship with God!

Next Week:

November 12th-16th: “Authentic Self” Busy Student Retreat: While our original deadline to sign up has passed, many students have expressed to us that, due to schedules that weren’t set in stone ahead of time, they were unable to plan for the Busy Student Retreat more than a week in advance. With that said, we’ve extended the sign up deadline to this Wednesday, November 8. Find the form to sign up on our Facebook Page, or send Steve an email!
