My Dear Parish Family,

I listen to sports talk radio more than I like to admit. In Cleveland, the hot topic of discussion right now is who will be the next head coach of the Cleveland Browns. It seems there is no end to so called experts that anticipate and speculate who might fill that role. Whether a call-in listener or the show host, they are each convinced of their vision of the future, that “their guy” is the answer. This is all, of course, only conjecture but they repeat their belief so often and with such passion that they actually begin to believe that what they say is the truth.

This experience is not all that different from the people in the region of the Jordan River, when they saw John the Baptist come on the scene. Here is this mysterious, eccentric hermit whose birth was announced by an angel, who makes the desert his home and is now baptizing in the Jordan. The environment is ripe with anticipation of the Messiah. Many people put these facts together to convince themselves that this must be the Christ. John sets the record straight.

Without any ambiguity he states, “I am not the Christ.” In sports talk he is saying, I am not even a worthy candidate for the job. In fact, The One to come is so far greater than I, that I am not fit to be the meanest of servants to Him. No sooner does John the Baptist make this clarification than Jesus presents Himself for baptism at his hand. This is the Lamb of God, the Anointed One, the one of whom I just spoke.

So how is it that He, through whom all that is came to be, should be baptized by this mortal? Because of the truth of the mystery of the Incarnation, the truth that Jesus is fully human as well as fully divine that He enters the waters of the Jordan to be baptized. He shows us in this first public appearance of His mission where we humans must begin – in baptism. Jesus came to take upon Himself the sins of the world. In His Baptism, He brings all these sins into the Jordan to be symbolically cleansed in a precursor of what He will do in reality when He takes them to His Cross and puts death to death forever.

In this is our joy and our hope because we know with all certainty Jesus is the only Man/God for this job.

Peace of Christ,
Deacon Bruce
