My Dear Parish Family,

As we contemplate the Gospel on this Second Sunday of Lent, I ask you to call to mind a person of significance in your life whom you, through the circumstances of your life, were caused to view in a different light. Perhaps it was when you were able to finally view your parent in a new light when you yourself became a parent. Perhaps it was that day when you first saw that person you had fallen in love with as your future spouse. These types of moments that change relationships forever is what today’s Gospel relates to us.

We hear, “Jesus took Peter, John, and James and went up the mountain to pray.” It was while praying that Jesus was transfigured, His clothes becoming dazzlingly white and this significant presentation of Himself to His disciples occurred. The sleepy disciples were “fully awakened” to behold Jesus in “a new light.” This would change forever how these three would look at Jesus. For this brief moment, Jesus reveals as much of His Divine identity as these mortals could handle. To fortify and testify to this “new look” for Jesus as the fulfillment of all God had promised, Moses the receiver of God’s Law and Elijah the giver of God’s Word appeared with the Lord. What is more, they are conversing about the things for which Peter was rebuked for trying to prevent – namely the pending passion and death of our Lord in Jerusalem.

In this compact, powerful encounter the path Jesus must take in order to win our salvations is affirmed but with the reassurance (for the benefit of the three apostles, not Jesus) that this is how the story will end – with Jesus, the obedient Son of the Father glorified in splendor. Just what they needed, just when they needed it. It was indeed “good for them to be there,” as Peter stated. But it was not good for them to remain there, for Jesus was yet to accomplish His mission.

This encounter changed the way Peter, Andrew and James looked at Jesus forever. During this season of Lent may we take every opportunity in our practices of almsgiving, fasting and prayer to allow Christ to reveal Himself anew in our lives. Pray that your spiritual vision be improved and refined so that like these three disciples, when the encounter is over, we may come to realize and believe more completely that Jesus is “My (The Father’s) chosen Son” and learn to listen to Him.

Peace of Christ,
Deacon Bruce
