My Dear Parish Family,

We have an excellent example of inductive logic in our first reading today that points to a conclusion that is anything but trivial. For example, if I provide the first few numbers of a sequence such as 50, 40, 30, 20 and asked you what the next number was, the obvious answer is 10. You can see how the pattern that is established leads you to the next thing.

The wicked towns of Sodom and Gomorrah are about to be destroyed under the just judgement of God. Abraham enters into a conversation with God, not to stay the execution of the guilty but to plead on behalf of the innocent. Abraham knows his God to be perfectly just in all God’s dealings with him so he questions God, “Will you sweep away the innocent with the guilty?” Abraham does not barter with God as one would haggle with a street vendor, but rather he is determined to understand how God’s mercy is balanced with God’s justice. He proceeds through the sequence above, 50 innocent, 40 innocent and so on until he gets to 10. At every step of the way, Abraham is reverent and deferential to God, knowing his status as creature before his creator. He ceases at 10, because it is clear to both God and he that there are not 10 righteous people who remain.

Each time, God replies that a small number of innocent people outweigh the guilt of the entire population of the two cities combined. This means that each righteous person, in the eyes of God is so highly valued that it outweighs evil deeds of the very many. In fact, (if you do the math) the value of each righteous person increases as the number of the innocent required to fend off destruction decreases. This leads us to the following question.

How far can we take this progression and still have the innocence on the one side outweigh the guilt of the many on the other? The non-trivial conclusion is one — under that condition that the one is perfectly innocent, perfectly righteous and wholly acceptable to God the Father. The one is, of course, Jesus Christ our Lord. He alone offered Himself as a sacrifice for the guilty, to fend off the just sentence of death to not only two ancient towns of Sodom and Gomorrah, but for every person who has ever lived, is living and will come to be. QED.

Peace of Christ,
Deacon Bruce

Natural Family Planning Week Concludes with Good News!
Hormonal contraceptive use is dropping – between 2005 and 2015, it fell by 13%. Believe it or not, NFP is going mainstream. More studies continue to confirm both the risks associated with hormonal contraceptives, and the validity of fertility awareness-based methods (FABMs) as a reliable – and desirable – option. The culture and medical communities are now beginning to discover what CCL and the NFP community have known for decades: NFP upholds women’s health technology, or FemTech, will be a $50 billion industry by 2025.

To everyone who has kept the message of Humanae Vitae alive and active over the past 51 years, we thank you for your perseverance and faith. For more information on NFP or to inquire about the next three-class session at Holy Rosary taught by Holy Rosary parishioners, beginning on September 22nd, we invite you to visit https://ccli.org/learn-nfp-from-ccl.
