Reflection on today’s Second Reading
1 Timothy 2:1-8

Saint Paul speaks as a “teacher of the Gentiles in faith and truth.” He is passionate about his mission and tells Timothy, “I am speaking the truth” relating to his appointment as preacher and apostle.

There are a few themes in this short reading, including our responsibility to pray for others. Paul mentions different types of prayer including supplications, prayers, petitions and thanksgiving. He doesn’t simply suggest prayers and thanksgiving for families and friends which is often an easy thing to pray about – but instead we are asked to offer our prayers for everyone! Then Paul specifically mentions to pray “for kings and for all in authority.” In our present political climate, it may seem like a radical concept to pray for political leaders, but our prayers are certainly needed to lessen the divisiveness in the world today.

The reality for the early Christians was that if those in authority are at peace then those subject to their authority can have a “quiet and tranquil life.” Paul’s letter was written before widespread persecution of early Christians began. Paul hoped for a society based on dignity and devotion so that all will be “good and pleasing to God.”

Paul’s words have a similar message for modern times. We live in a society in which resistance to authority is commonplace and putting one’s personal needs first is a priority. In recent years, there have been challenges to religious freedom in this country also. Christianity and its recognition of the authority of God was countercultural in Paul’s time and remains so today.

Paul willingly accepted the responsibility of preaching the truth. He taught about Christ – the mediator between God and humanity, the same Jesus Christ who willingly sacrificed Himself so that we all might share in eternal life. Paul traveled to distant lands to tell others about Jesus Christ, to encourage unity and dignity and the value of prayer as a regular part of Christian life.

Paul’s letter to Timothy today stands as a reminder that we have a responsibility to pray for everyone, which includes those living on the other side of the globe. We can pray for all world leaders, for the poor and the oppressed, for those near and far, our loved ones as well as our enemies.

We may not all be called to travel throughout the world preaching the Gospel as Saint Paul did, but we share a responsibility to pray for the efforts of missionaries throughout the world. Additionally, we have a special opportunity today to generously support the work of the La Salette Missionaries during our annual Mission Appeal at Holy Rosary.
