La Historia y Usted: Segundo Domingo de Adviento
La más divertida pegatina que he visto tiene una especie de Adviento tinte a él: Jesús va a volver. Mira ocupado.

Todavía me río entre dientes. Lo que lo hace divertido, creo yo, es que traiciona nuestro malentendido desafortunado de lo Divino. Si Jesús va a regresar y, por cierto, nunca se fue, gracias a su permanente Espíritu Santo, entonces tiene que ser como el maestro que viene de nuevo en la habitación, o el jefe de regresar de un viaje. Mira ocupado, todo el mundo! Porque todo lo que hemos estado haciendo mientras que el jefe había desaparecido debe ser sin valor. Trabajar en proyectos, respondiendo a mensajes de correo electrónico en nuestro propio programa, o incluso tomar un delicioso día de enfermedad debe ser todo un derroche de dinero de la compañía. El jefe nos quiere trabajar, trabajar y trabajar, y si trabajamos lo suficiente vamos a obtener un ascenso para que podamos trabajar aún más duro.

Yuck. Qué Jesús extraña e infeliz debemos estar esperando. Nos vemos en el Evangelio que la gente de toda la región de Judea y todos los habitantes de Jerusalén estaban haciendo el viaje al desierto para escuchar a Juan y ser bautizado por él. Y apuesto a que todos estaban dispuestos a utilizar sus días de enfermedad para llegar allí.

¿Por qué? Porque sentían que Juan era el testimonio de Aquel que vino, y no quería estar lo más cerca que podían conseguir.

Sospecho que, si Jesús tiene preguntas de nosotros en su regreso, que será algo como esto: ¿Te diste cuenta la asombrosa belleza del mundo? ¿Te gusta lo mejor que podía? ¿Sabía usted cava profundo y encontrar la gracia de perdonar? Y, por último, he conocido a usted mucho. Me conoces? (C.S.Lewis, La Última Batalla.)

¿Cómo se va Adviento para usted hasta ahora?

The Story and You: Second Sunday of Advent
The funniest bumper sticker I've ever seen has a kind of Advent tint to it: Jesus is coming back. Look busy.

I still chuckle. What makes it funny, I think, is that it betrays our hapless misunderstanding of the Divine. If Jesus is coming back—and, by the way, he never left, thanks to his abiding Holy Spirit—then it must be like the teacher coming back into the room, or the boss returning from a trip. Look busy, everybody! Because everything we've been doing while the boss was gone must be worthless. Working on projects, answering e-mails on our own schedule, or even taking a delicious sick day must all be a waste of the company's money. The boss wants us to work, work, work, and if we work enough we'll get promoted so we can work even harder.

Yuck. What an odd and unhappy Jesus we must be expecting. We see in the gospel that people of the whole Judean countryside and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem were making the trek out to the desert to hear John and be baptized by him. And I'll bet they were all willing to use their sick days to get there. Why? Because they sensed that John was the witness of the One to come, and they wanted to be as close as they could get.

I suspect that, if Jesus has questions of us at his return, they will be something like this: Did you notice the astounding beauty of the world? Did you love as well as you could? Did you dig deep and find the grace to forgive? And, finally, I have known you long. Do you know me? (C.S.Lewis, The Last Battle)

How is Advent going for you so far?
