18th. Sunday in Ordinary Time August 6, 2017

First Reading: Daniel 7: 9-10, 13-14

This description of the heavenly court is the background for the arrival of the Son of man, or God in human form. He is the Messiah who has received kingship and everlasting domain.

Second Reading: II Peter 11:16-19

Peter declares himself to be a special and most credible witness to the transfiguration of Jesus. "The morning star" he refers to is the light that rises at the end of time with the second coming of Christ.

Gospel: Matthew 17:1-9

Jesus becomes a being of light, who converses with Moses and Elijah, the two major "seers of God" in the Old Testament. The tents refer to the Jewish feast of Tabernacles. The voice of the Father confirms Jesus' divine identity.

Reflection by Rev. Leonard N. Peterson

How often have we wanted to be like “a fly on the wall” when it comes to certain private conversations! For example, that famous one with the two disciples on the fabled road to Emmaus on the first Easter evening with Jesus as a Scripture teacher. Or that much later one at the end of the Civil War when Grant met Lee at the Appomatox Court House. Or that less historic but intriguing one in the Oval Office with Trump and Comey. No such thing as tape recorders running for the first two. Only a whisper of one for the last. But I for one would be intrigued by those and many more choices that history presents.

In the instance of the Transfiguration of Our Lord, we do have the words of Scripture to bring us close. We learn that Moses and Elijah were speaking about something with Jesus. Matthew holds back from telling us the topic in his version. (We have to wait for Year “C” to find Luke telling us they were talking about Our Lord’s pending passion and death, His “exodus” to be accomplished in the area of Jerusalem.)

We also “overhear” St. Peter telling Jesus “how good it is to be here” coupled with his desire to set up three tents. Jesus says nothing because His Father speaks, not only with an identification of Jesus as His Son, but also such a command to Peter (and us) to pay attention to what Jesus says.

St. Peter, it turns out, had better pay attention because he is destined to be “the Rock”, the solid but faulty foundation of the new Church.

In his letter read today, we learn that Peter does not exploit the transfiguration as a mark of his self-importance. Rather does he repeat the admonition he was given that wonderful day when he tells us, in an almost lyrical way, to pay attention to Jesus “until the morning star rises in your hearts.” What is that morning star? No less than the beautiful light that will accompany Jesus when he returns.

In obeying Peter’s injunction, you and I can have that confidence that comes from knowing that all of our private conversations with God, in prayer, can and will be heard. In the end, they are the only conversations that count. So it is to our detriment if we only speak to God on Sundays.

An unknown wag put it this way, and you have to pay attention if you truly want to get his point about prayer. He says “A hypocrite prays on his knees on Sunday—and on his neighbors the rest of the week.”
