

Hello,

My name is Ms. Bradberry, and I will be teaching Mrs. Hornick's English courses for the remainder of the school year. Some students are already familiar with me. Between 2017 and 2019 I was a Comprehensive English teacher and Home Instructor for the Upper School and Paraprofessional for the Lower School through Catapult Learning.

I earned Ph.D. candidacy in Education: Curriculum and Teaching (Northcentral University), an M.A. in English (TCNJ) and a B.A. in English (Ursinus College), with additional doctoral studies in Naturopathy and Metaphysics. My educational certifications include a New Jersey (Highly Qualified), a Pennsylvania, a Florida Provisional, and an Emergency Special Education teaching certification. Professional certifications include Classroom Management, Differentiated Instruction and Writing for Children and Teenagers.

My professional teaching spans over 16 years in face-to-face, hybrid and online classes. I have taught all grades from pre-K to 12, as well as undergraduate and graduate courses as an adjunct professor. My background includes being the former founder/owner of an educational business, teacher, adjunct professor of multiple disciplines, paraprofessional, tutor, content and curriculum developer, speaker and consultant.

Since 2006, I have built and/or instructed courses in Moodle, Blackboard, WebCT, Angel, and Sakai. My experience also includes developing and rewriting curricula. In terms of English courses, I started as a high school English teacher (American, British, World Literatures). I then went on to instruct college courses in Composition, Basic Writing, Rhetorical Skills, Public Speaking, Academic Writing and Research, World Literature, American Literature, and Women's Literature.

I look forward to ending the school year on an awesome note! I will be reaching out to all parents/guardians individually in the coming days to introduce myself, field any questions you might have, and learn of anything you would like me to know about your son and/or daughter.

All the best,
Stephanie J. Bradberry
